Minister Says

Priorities on Blood Plasma Plant Refused

Priorities needed for establishment of a $10,000 blood plasma plant at the University of Alberta cannot be obtained from Dominion authorities, according to word received in Edmonton by Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health.

"We have been advised the equipment is not available this year," said Dr. Cross. "If it is available next year, we were told we would get it. Therefore, plans for the plasma plant are off this year."

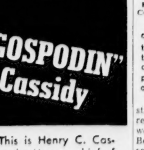

The government announced its intention to establish the plasma plant in the Speech from the Throne delivered at the last session of the legislature. At that time it was said the government would purchase the equipment, to be installed at the university laboratory, so that dried blood plasma could be supplied to all hospitals in the province at cost. Subsequently, the $10,000 was passed in estimates, under appropriations for the Bureau of Public Welfare.

Negotiations are still proceeding in regard to Alberta's proposal to build a 200-bed tuberculosis sanatorium in Edmonton, Dr. Cross said. This plan was announced by the late Premier Aberhart last January, and since that time, the matter has been under discussion by dominion, provincial and American authorities. Cost of this project was to be $500,000.

LONDON, July 14.—Powerful formations of Flying Fortresses teamed with British light bombers today in a three-pronged assault on German air factories and installations on the outskirts of Paris and in the Amiens area.

Eight bombers and four fighters were lost in the broadside bombardment of the famous Le Bourget airdrome and Villacoublay in the suburbs of Paris and the Amiens-Glisy airfield.

The day raids, putting the resumed offensive against Europe back on a non-stop basis, following a R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bombardment last night of the German industrial and railway centre of Aachen.

DOWN 45 FIGHTERS

The four-motored American bombers plowed through stiff German fighter opposition, particularly in the Paris area. The Fortress gunners shot down more than 45 German fighters, incomplete reports indicated.

R.A.F. Boston and Typhoon bombers attacked German airfields at Abbeville and Tricqueville.

The Americans were out by the early morning light, their departure dovetailing with the return of the last of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. bombers, which struck in force at Aachen at a cost of 20 planes.

USE BIGGEST BOMBS

The air ministry said a "good number" of four-ton blockbusters were dumped on the communications hub and industrial centre near the northeast border of Belgium.

"Nearly every plane in one squadron of Lancasters carried an 8,000-pounder," an official statement said.

Twenty planes were lost in the raid on Aachen, which lies just across the north-eastern border of Belgium.

German planes, including dive-bombers, made a sharp raid on an English coast town during the night and rescuers still were digging for bodies this morning. A bakery and a number of dwellings were wrecked.

MOSCOW, July 14. — The 10-day-old battle of Kursk appeared to have reached the turning point today with mounting Russian counter-attacks pointing to a possible early full-scale counter-offensive.

The Red army, buttressed by strong reinforcements of tanks, was reported to be clipping off German wedges in bitter fighting around Belgorod and field dispatches asserted that the Russians were wresting the initiative from the enemy all along the 165-mile Kursk front.

The Russians were hurling large forces into simultaneous counter-attacks against the point and flanks

1st Division of Canada Army Now in Sicily

London and Ottawa have approved naming the Canadian 1st Division as the one engaged in the Sicilian invasion.—EDITOR.

LONDON, July 14.—(CP)—The Canadian 1st Division, which landed in Sicily last Saturday and now is fighting as part of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 8th Army, has had more than 3½ years of training experience.

The 1st Division is the veteran formation of the Canadian Army. It arrived in Britain in December, 1939, with Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton (then a major general) as divisional commander.

GENERAL NOT NAMED

For security reasons it has not yet been announced which general officer commands the division in Sicily.

The division had been on the verge of action several times in earlier years of the war. Some of its units went to Scotland in the spring of 1940, on their way to Norway, where they were scheduled to attack Trondheim.

But they were turned back before crossing when the British diversionary attacks further north scored initial successes. Shortly afterwards the Norwegian campaign collapsed.

In June, 1940, just before France fell, a brigade of the 1st Division crossed the channel as part of a British plan to send a new expeditionary force to aid France. But the military situation had deteriorated there so rapidly that it was decided to recall the brigade, which had penetrated deeply into France without, however, meeting the enemy.

OCCUPIED SPITZBERGEN

In 1941 the 1st Division provided the troops that occupied Spitzbergen, a task which was carried throughout without encountering the enemy. The Canadians destroyed military objectives on the island and returned to Britain.

Now the division is at least in full action after its long wait.

Greek Destroyer Subdued Augusta

LONDON, July 14. — (CP) — A London Daily Express correspondent reported in a dispatch written "on a cruiser off Augusta, July 12," that Augusta, Sicily, was subdued by a Greek destroyer. The dispatch said that Augusta, a town with a normal population of 17,000, had been evacuated after a naval bombardment and "only one man" could be found in it later.

Claim Rommel Shot Down While Flying to Sicily

LONDON, July 14.—(CP)—A roundabout and wholly unconfirmed report said last night that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was shot down by Allied fighter pilots on his way to Sicily Tuesday. There has been no Allied claim of such an incident.

The report was said to have originated with the German underground radio station "Atlantic", which was quoted by the Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet. The Swedish report was sent to London by a Reuters' News Agency correspondent.

According to this version, Rommel was said to have been travelling in a transport plane under a strong fighter escort en route to Sicily to take command there. He was said to have been accompanied by Gen. Siegfried Westfals, Lt.-Col. Riehl and three Italian staff officers.

Edmonton Naval Officer Has Role In Successful Sicilian Landings

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 13. —(Delayed)—Two flotillas of Canadian assault craft completed their task of landing troops in Sicily without casualties, while two more flotillas, larger craft, were left at the scene discharging supplies for the invading forces, returning Canadian officers reported today.

The officers said the opposition was far lighter than expected, although they added that they had some narrow escapes from coastal defence guns.

Italian mortars fired on the landing craft continuously until silenced by guns of the supporting naval forces and snipers and machine-gun nests kept firing at the invaders until put out of action by the assault troops.

Lieut.-Commander Ernest H. Bartlett of Toronto, Ont., formerly of the editorial staff of the Evening Telegram, told the British United Press:

SUB-LT. G. E. ALLIN

"Only when the first craft almost touched the allotted beach did opposition develop. It was intense at the beginning. Mortars, machine guns and rifles came into play from enemy territory. The invasion craft were run in at comparatively slow speed since surprise and not speed was essential."

Two of the returning landing craft had narrow escapes when a shell exploded between them.

"Our luck was with us," said Sub-Lieut. G. E. Allin of Edmonton, Alta., and Leading Seaman W. Darmbrough of Toronto.

(Sub-Lieut. Allin is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Norman Allin of 11110 86 avenue, and earned his commission after "coming up from the lower deck." He was formerly a medical student at the University of Alberta. A brother, Sgt. Observer Robert E. Allin, of the R.C.A.F. attached to the R.A.F., was killed in action off the African coast some time ago.)

Others in the landing parties included A.B. D. Townson, 10416 102 avenue; A.B. J. E. Conroy, 10626 109 avenue, Edmonton, and Leading Stoker M. Dixon, Vermilion, Alta.

INCREDIBLE SIGHT

Bartlett said that within a few hours of the first assault wave there was an "incredible sight of scores of Allied ships riding easily and safely within the Sicilian range of

Not Possible To Give Name Canuck Leader

OTTAWA, July 14—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston today told the House of Commons that for security reasons he could not, yet reveal the name of the officer commanding the Canadian force in Sicily, but that he would do so as soon as possible.

(It was disclosed today that the 1st Canadian Division is in Sicily.)

Prime Minister Mackenzie King supplemented Col. Ralston's statement by saying the restrictions of security had frequently placed him in a "difficult position."

KNEW OF PLANS

He said that he knew all last Friday what was to happen in Sicily but had been bound by security regulations not to reveal it. Mr. King said his instructions were that nothing could be said of Canadian participation until midnight Saturday but when the information about Canadians came from the United States early Saturday morning he had made his announcement regarding it.

Col. Ralston said it was not because of any reluctance on his part that he could not reveal the name of the Canadian commanding officer.

But Canadians were not the only troops involved and there was an agreement that there would be no announcement regarding commanding officers until the commander-in-chief (Gen. Dwight Eisenhower) agreed.

HANSON CRITICAL

Hon. R. B. Hanson (Prog. Con. York-Sunbury) said it was "amazing" that this information could not be given to Canadians when it was revealed in relation to other forces.

He said he hoped the Canadians were competently commanded and

Greeks Asking For Your Help To Win Battle

It is probable that Greek soldiers are fighting with Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery on Sicily. Although they have suffered cruelly for their resistance to the enemy the Greeks have never stopped fighting for their freedom. Even in the homeland well organized bands of guerillas are doing much to disrupt the Axis forces of occupation.

The wives and families of these gallant fighting men have been dying by thousands in Greece, from starvation and disease. The people of Canada are asked to help them by contributing to the Canadian Greek War Relief fund. The money raised will be used to buy and ship supplies of medicine, food, clothing and other articles to the people of Greece.

Time to Take War Into Italy 8th Army Told

LONDON, July 14.—(CP)—Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery told his 8th Army troops before they invaded Sicily "the time has come to carry the war into Italy and into the continent of Europe . . . They (the Italians) asked for it and now they will get it."

In the message released today by the ministry of information, Gen. Montgomery declared: "The Italian Abyssinia empire has been exterminated.

DEAL WITH HOMELAND

"We will now deal with the home country. To the 8th Army has been given the great honor of representing the British Empire in the Allied force which is now to carry out its task.

"On our left will be our American Allies. Together, we will set about the Italians in their own country in no uncertain way. They came into this war to suit themselves and they must take the consequences. They asked for it and now they will get it."

Montgomery, voicing a hearty welcome to the Canadian troops now joining the 8th Army, continued:

MAGNIFICENT SOLDIERS

"I know well the fighting men of Canada. They are magnificent soldiers and the long and careful training they have received in England will now be put to very good use to the great benefit of the 8th Army.

"The task in front of us is not easy. But it is not so difficult as many we have had in the past and have overcome successfully.

City Airman Bails Out at 8,000 Feet—Lands Right on Cow's Back

By ALLAN NICKLESON

WITH THE R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, July 14.—(CP)—The bomber boys around Canada's Lion Squadron refer to Vaughan Ganderton as "Cowpuncher", and not because his home is in western Canada.

Ganderton, a flight lieutenant from Edmonton (10327 92nd street, bailed out of his crippled Halifax over the green fields of southern England—and landed on a cow. The cow gave a startled leap and Ganderton hit the ground.

Pilot Ganderton and his crew "hit the silk" after a Nazi night-fighter riddled their aircraft with cannon and machinegun fire. None of the crew was wounded but two suffered injury on making hard landings by parachute. They were Flt. Sgt. Bill Newcombe of Vancouver, fractured thigh, and FO Paul Soeder, Saskatoon navigator, who sprained an ankle.

FLT.-LT. GANDERTON

INJURY IRONICAL

"Newcombe's injury was ironical after what he escaped in the air," Ganderton said. "The rear turret motor was shot out from between his legs and the blast of fire also cut off the oxygen tube in front of his face, knocked out his intercommunication set and there were at least 20 separate holes in his rear turret.

"We dived and lost the fighter," Ganderton said. "We jettisoned our bombs but found we couldn't manoeuvre very well and after a conference the crew voted to try for England instead of parachuting immediately. We gradually lost height but made the English coast. When we got down to 8,000 feet we realized it was hopeless to try and land so we jumped."

Weak Resistance Is Being Offered Montgomery's Men

By DANIEL DE LUCE

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 14.—(AP)—Britain's veteran 8th Army today plunged northward beyond fallen Augusta toward Catania against weak resistance in a sizzling drive to seal off Sicily's east coast and set the stage for another Cap Bon.

(Reuters News Agency in London recorded an Algiers broadcast saying British, Canadian and American forces were storming the walls of Catania.)

It was disclosed that in their drive northeast from their beach landings the Canadians have practically destroyed the Italian 206th coastal division, capturing its commander, Gen. D'Avet, his staff and headquarters.

Position Like That in Tunisia

The position of Catania, astride the road to Messina and 55 miles from the strategic water neck which separates Sicily from Italy, was much like that of Hammam Lif at the entrance to Cap Bon in Tunisia where the British 1st Army broke through last May and completed Col.-Gen. Jurgen Von Arnim's catastrophe.

Catania, its airport bombarded by British warships early yesterday and plastered by loads of bombs from American bombers a few hours later, appeared to be in a precarious position as Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery battered back German resistance.

Already Allied naval forces were disputing domination of all sea approaches to Messina Straits.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 14.—American forces, supported by naval bombardments, smashed forward six to 10 miles in South Sicily and captured the important Axis base at Comiso today while British and Canadian assault troops pressed up the eastern coast toward shell-pitted Catania.

Axis resistance appeared to be stiffening but the Americans hammered their way into Naro, Palma and Ponte Olivo airfield following a junction with the Canadians at captured Ragusa, and were reported about 30 miles inland at some points.

The American advance from Licata through Palma and to Naro covered about 20 air line miles and put the Allies within 10 or 12 miles of the important Axis base at Agrigento. This gain, which was at the western end of the Allied front, gave the Americans command of roads running northward to Canicatti.

The capture of Ponte Olivo, near Gela, was believed to have been designed to eliminate the immediate threat of strong Axis counter blows in that sector.

The Americans knocked out ten Nazi Mark IV tanks in

Canadian Bugler Plays Boogie Woogie Reveille

By ROBERT VERMILLION

A NORTH AFRICAN PORT, July 13.—(Delayed)—A boogie woogie reveille from the cornet of a bugler who could not quite master the regulation number startled officers aboard the Canadian troopship "Smelly Nelly" one morning.

They liked the idea so well that the bugler, who had tried for five days to master the regulation reveille, blared out swing numbers every morning on his cornet, tooting two or three request selections to awaken the men.

The fact that the Canadian officers, bound for the Mediterranean battle zone on a 10-day convoy journey were not shocked by violations of military etiquette, in no way reflects on the discipline of the army, one of the least hide-bound military organizations in the world.

Before sailing the troops let off steam by yelling "Yahoo yippee" from the windows of their train bound to the embarkation port. These noises could originate nowhere but on the North American prairies.

In barracks before leaving for the Mediterranean the troops, many of them wed to English girls, posed a problem for their officers. Confined to their quarters, dozens of them suddenly discovered they needed leave because they were about to become fathers.

Remarked the officer commanding the camp:

"It seems every woman in England is expecting a baby momentarily and didn't discover it until now."

that "Canada will not be left out of the picture altogether."

Col. Ralston said there was not likely to be any question about Canada's being in the picture. The names of corps or divisional commanders had not been made public in many instances, he said.

Col. Ralston said he was "sometimes irked myself" at security restrictions.

He said it was recognized that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt were the supreme directors of Allied war strategy and major announcements should come from them.

OTHERS INVOLVED

But, he said, he realized Canadians might think it "singular" that first announcements of Canadian actions did not come from the prime minister of Canada.

But there were many other nations involved and if he sought to assert himself in this connection others in a similar situation might do likewise.

His stand had been to "find as little fault as possible" and that stand had frequently caused misunderstanding.

But when, shortly after midnight last Friday night, the news came from Washington that Canadians were in the forces invading Sicily, he had disregarded the order prohibiting him from mentioning this fact until Saturday night.

"I am not criticizing anybody," he said, regarding the American release. "But I am asking myself what this House of Commons and the people of Canada would say of the prime minister if he had left his announcement on Canadian participation until midnight Saturday."

Luckiest "Bailer-Outer"

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 14.—(AP)—The luckiest "bailer-outer" of the United States Air Forces was believed roaming behind enemy lines in Sicily Monday night, driving an Axis truck and trying to fight his way to Allied positions.

The pilot of an American bomber was attacked by an Italian fighter, and as he eased out of his damaged craft, his parachute caught on the fuselage and split.

The pilot dropped toward the earth while fellow fliers hovering above held their breath. He came down between two buildings. Remnants of the torn chute caught on a roof ledge a few feet from the ground and his fall was broken. He hung dangling for a moment. Then he disengaged himself, dropped unscratched, and began running towards an enemy truck. That's the last his comrades saw of him.

8th Army Plunges Toward Important Port of Catania; Canucks Smash Italo Division

repulsing counter-attacks by Italians and by the Hermann Goering division northwest and northeast of Gela.

Catania Airport Heavily Battered

On the east coast, where Allied warships and air squadrons battered Catania airport, the Anglo-Canadian forces had not yet reported big scale enemy counter-attacks. It was said there was no fighting as yet in or immediately around Catania, which has not been captured. The town of Meilili also was reported still in Axis hands, although it was bypassed by the British coastal forces that captured the big naval base at Augusta early this morning.

The capture of Naro and Comiso was believed to have greatly improved the Americans' position in the south, where the hardest fighting so far had centred around Gela. The Americans were thrown back there but rallied to advance against Italian and German counter-attacks.

Their latest gains consolidated their grip on the mountain roads and provided bases for thrusts northward from the Comiso-Ragusa area.

Entire Italian Division Smashed

Catania airport was shelled from the sea and smothered by many tons of aerial bombs, according to today's communique, which said that disembarkation operations—which previously had been unofficially reported near Catania—"proceeded smoothly." The points of disembarkation were not given in the communique.

While American warships smashed Axis tank columns and air fields on the south coast of Sicily, the British and Canadian drive up the east coast toward Catania smashed an entire Italian division, and boosted the estimated number of prisoners to around 8,000, mostly Italians.

(Radio Algiers said that American troops on the south coast of Sicily had captured the important Axis air base and the town of Comiso and the airport at Ponte Olivo, near Gela, thus extending their bridgehead inland in heavy fighting against Italians and units of the Nazi Hermann Goering division. Ten big Nazi Tiger tanks were reported knocked out and the Americans were landing additional armor.)

Big Battles Said Developing

(Axis broadcasts reported that big battles were developing in the mountains south of Catania, indicating that the Germans and Italians were making their most important stand so far.)

The capture of Ragusa and Naro, which was taken by Americans advancing from Licata, as well as meagre reports from the Catania front indicated that a period of much more intense fighting was beginning.

The British Eighth Army and Canadians on the Catania plains sector was believed to be engaging strong German and Italian forces rushed there from central concentration points.

With Gen. Sir Harold Alexander commanding the Sicilian front, it was believed likely that there would be a repetition of his strategy in Tunisia where a number of slicing drives were made between the main enemy forces.

The communique said that British and Greek destroyers shelled the port of Augusta, main Italian naval base on the east coast at 6 p.m. Monday and that Allied forces occupied that port early this (Wednesday) morning.

The Augusta harbor facilities were almost intact and the Italian 206th coastal division virtually was destroyed in the operations on the east coast, where Catania airfield was heavily shelled by Allied warships early Tuesday.

The communique said that despite some enemy bombing attacks the "disembarkation proceeded smoothly," presumably close to Catania.

The Allies seized at least 2,000 more prisoners, mostly Italians, while a flotilla of M.T.B.'s (motor torpedo boats) operating in the straits of Messina, engaged two Axis torpedo boats which were set ablaze and driven ashore. A third enemy boat was damaged but escaped.

American warships supported United States troops under Gen. George S. Patton Jr., who were engaging enemy tank formations behind Gela and also bombarded the airfield at Ponte Olivo. The American warships then shelled enemy positions at Porto Empedocle, on the south coast of Sicily west of Agrigento.

(American troops had been reported pushing westward from Licata toward Agrigento against stiff opposition.)

The communique said there were further general advances in all sectors following capture of Augusta, stiffening all along the front.

LONDON, July 14. — The chances for a Sicilian Dunkirk are regarded as extremely slim by military observers, despite the fact that only two and a half miles of water separate the island from the Italian tip at the narrowest point.

It is believed here that Italian and German forces are fighting under orders to resist to the end and it is doubted whether an attempt will be made for large-scale evacuation when and if the Axis loses the decisive battle for control of the island. It is emphasized now that this battle may begin at any moment.

SEA, AIR THREAT

Even if a major evacuation were attempted by the Axis command, the chances for its success would be very small. Allied naval forces are ranging northward along the Sicilian east coast and the Allied air umbrella is in position to attack any evacuation craft attempting to put out from Messina.

It is understood that the Italians already are making contact between Messina and Reggio Calabria only with the greatest difficulty. Moreover, it is expected that the decisive battle will be fought on the Catania or Licata Plains, or on the plateau connecting them.

An Allied victory on that terrain would split the Axis forces, cutting off those in the western and northern parts of the island from those on the northeastern tip since it would give the Allies control of the east-west railroad from Catania to Caltanissetta.

It is reported that the Allied operations so far are considerably ahead of schedule.

Temperatures within the sun may go as high as 70,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

of wedges driven into their lines near Belgorod in the early stages of the German summer offensive last week.

While it still is premature to conclude that the German offensive has been definitely broken, it now is clear that the enemy has not achieved any significant tactical success. Russian losses have been heavy, but lower than those of the Germans.

(London military experts said there was no confirmation of reports that Adolf Hitler has assumed personal charge of the Axis summer offensive around Kursk. "We hope the reports are true," one commentator said.)

(Another London dispatch said that the Red army was believed to have recovered most of the position lost in the early days of the Axis offensive around Belgorod and it speculated that the Russians may launch a heavy blow against the almost-exhausted Germans momentarily.)

what had been an enemy stronghold."

Bartlett explained the flotillas he was with transported British troops. Personnel of the flotillas included 130 men from Ontario although each regiment had its quota Montreal led the cities with 40 officers.

"One hour before the troops were due to leave the transports and enter the invasion craft," Bartlett said, "they were far more interested in whether they were going to have two no trumps than in the landing."

Bartlett praised the forces taking part in the landing.

"The naval forces turned in a beautiful job. Those land fighting boys were okay, too, and our airforces were doing a swell job overhead."

Among the officers in the flotilla were Lieut. R. Seely, R.C.N.V.R. of Regina, Sask.; Lieut. W. J. Mullins, Bromptonville, Que.; Lieut. J. C. Davie, Duncan, B.C.; Lieut. J. E. Cox, Saskatoon, Sask.; Lieut.-Cmdr. K. MacLachlan, former deputy minister of naval services for Canada.

Ragusa and Naro, in southeast Sicily, Canadian and American forces had made a junction yesterday at Ragusa, cutting off the whole southeastern tip of the island and seizing important communications centres.

On the east coast the British Eighth Army and Canadian units under Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery appeared to be making the greatest progress in their northward drive to the Catania plains.

(German and Italian communiques reported heavy battles developing in the mountains and near or on the Catania plains.)

American forces in the Gela-Licata sector appeared to be encountering the strongest opposition and it appeared that the American warship bombardments in that sector were an effort to aid in securing and extending the bridgehead as swiftly as possible.

Allied air fleets, including Flying Fortresses, provided a strong cover for the British advance up the east coast and hammered with renewed fury at enemy bases, including Catania airdrome, communications lines, gun emplacements and troop transport.

"CURTAIN OF FIRE"

"A swiftly moving curtain of fire power and bombs" hit the enemy in Sicily all day as the round-the-clock aerial attack was pressed, it was stated at headquarters.

"The navy's main task of supporting the army by commanding the sea and disembarking troops and their supplies continues," the communique from headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower said.

Throughout the operations warships have rendered valuable support to the troops on shore by engaging surrounding formations and tank columns behind Gela and among other targets, the airfield at Ponte Olivo and enemy positions at Porto Empedocle.

(Axis broadcasts acknowledged the fall of Augusta and told of raids on Allied shipping in Augusta harbor. Reports reaching Madrid said Augusta was captured by the Allies after severe sea and air attacks. From Stockholm came a report attributed to Axis sources that Montgomery's main forces were within seven miles of Catania with advance guards even nearer.)

(Madrid also said British landing parties had appeared near Porto Empedocle, on the Sicilian south coast 26 miles northwest of American-held Licata.)

(A Gigman broadcast quoted a Spanish dispatch as saying that 60 landing barges with an escort of destroyers steamed into the Mediterranean from Gibraltar yesterday and a convoy of nine vessels entered Gibraltar harbor shortly afterward.)

American and Anglo-Canadian forces who joined hands in the outskirts of Ragusa, a small oil centre 33 miles west southwest of Syracuse, were reported unofficially to have captured the city, but this also was unconfirmed. Enemy lines were stiffening all along the front.

Premier Praises Services to Board

Premier Ernest Manning Wednesday morning expressed high appreciation of the work of W. J. Dick, who for the past two years has been part-time member of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Alberta.

"Mr. Dick has rendered very valuable service to the compensation board," Mr. Manning said.

As Mr. Dick is regional oil controller for the province, it would be impossible for him to act as a full-time member of the compensation board, because of his other duties.

Urge Protection On Cattle Sales

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—Increased protection for producers of livestock in the marketing of their products was urged last night in the senate.

The subject of livestock marketing came before the upper house when Senator Arthur Sauve (Prog Con., Quebec) moved that the government give consideration to setting up a commission to investigate the Montreal public abattoirs.

Senator Sauve said numerous complaints had been made of farmers being treated unfairly and not receiving the return to which they were entitled.

Senator R. B. Horner (Prog Con Saskatchewan) supported Senator Sauve's resolution.

He said he had previously advocated public ownership of stock yards because of the conditions existing.

Senator Horner said some commission men, not satisfied with their normal commission, sold cattle to a fictitious name and then resold it to increase their profit.

Crew Is Rescued As Boat Burned

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—(AP)—The river boat Service caught fire in San Francisco Bay yesterday and burned to the water line after the crew had been taken off by a ferry boat from Richmond, the United States coastguard reported.

Commons Disposes Of Several Items

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—Proceedings speeded up in the House of Commons last night when the committee of the whole approved the external affairs war and non-war estimates, public works war estimates and made progress with war estimates of the war services department.

Longest debate was on Prime Minister Mackenzie King's estimates for the privy council, which included $688,000 for the wartime information board. After about four hours discussion and considerable criticism of the board, this and all other items administered by the prime minister were approved.

War Services Minister LaFleche told the commons that some two months ago $250,000 was set aside to provide for auxiliary services to follow the Canadian forces when they went on the offensive.

He had been pleased to see in yesterday's press reports of the Sicilian campaign that a Canadian auxiliary services officer was with the invading forces.

The craft, which normally carries a crew of about six men, was going between Angel Island and Richmond when it burst into flames.

Service Strongman

The Canadian Army and the Royal Canadian Air Force, co-operating with other United Nations Air Forces, have forced a mighty link in the wartime bomber route which joins the rugged Labrador coast to embattled Britain. The Canadian-built outpost at Goose Bay is one of the world's largest and most important air bases. The combined air forces operate the air line taking vital ships to battle zones. Canadian army units guard the area and Canadian construction gangs enlarge and maintain the outpost facilities. Gunner Eddie Theriault of Montreal, shown above, was a physical training instructor and artists' model in civilian life. He brought along weights to keep up his weight-lifting technique. Theriault was the Canadian feather-weight (132 pounds) weight-lifting champion, lifting 280 pounds in a clean jerk lift.

Information Board Praised For Work

By C. R. BLACKBURN

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—Government assertions that the wartime information board has performed an "extraordinary" service in obtaining publicity in the United States were heard in the House of Commons yesterday.

Brooke Claxton, parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister Mackenzie King in his capacity as president of the Privy Council, presented the case for the board after a half-hour statement by the prime minister.

Mr. Claxton said:

1. The use of Canadian news by United States publications had been "extraordinarily" increased through the board.

2. Salaries paid board officials were no greater than they received before they entered the government service.

3. The main purpose of the board was to ensure the distribution of proper information in the United States.

4. The board's work was likely to extend into the post-war period but with a different set-up.

5. The board did not seek to supplant any existing form of news distribution or any newspaper workers.

The discussion arose over the $658,000 item for the board's expenses during the current fiscal year.

Restrictions Fail To Curb Vacations

By The Canadian Press

Despite restrictions on travel, Canadians are going to preserve one of their most cherished heritages, the summer holiday. Many travel agencies and resort booking companies report all available accommodations filled for the rest of the summer.

In British Columbia, the Vancouver board of parks commissioners emphasized the advantages of the 14 public city parks, and is instituting a series of dance classes under the direction of a specialist in interpretative dancing.

With the opening of the Alaska Highway, the western provinces have forged a new bond of friendship with United States neighbors. Not long ago in Edmonton American boys from the United States army air force base squadron held a picnic with Canadian allies.

At Athabasca, a minister of the United church took a longing look at the prospect of a month at Banff, then turned his back on the pleasant picture and spent his vacation in an airplane plant.

Allied Army Strikes by Light of Bright Moon—Weather Perfect—No Details of Numbers or Commanders

LONDON, July 10 — A Reuters News Agency correspondent cabled today from North Africa that "The first line of Allied troops are this morning locked in combat with the enemy after clambering over mines and barbed-wire fences to attack pillboxes and machine-gun nests on the Sicilian beaches."

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 10 — (Saturday) — Allied forces stormed the rocky shores of Sicily today to open the second European front. Canadian, British and American forces were in the assault army.

The lightning-quick invasion was launched in good weather by a light moon as troop ships escorting warships skirted minefields and strongly placed enemy guns to reach their objective.

Italians, bulwarked by elite German troops, were expected to offer bitter resistance despite widespread discontent among the Italian population on the island with the course of the war.

"SCORCHED EARTH"

The Italians already had engaged in a scorched earth program, destroying harbor installations at Trapani, which is the closest important Sicilian port to Africa.

The official announcement did not disclose who were the commanders.

There was no immediate official report of the scale of the success.

Allied warplanes bombarded Sicily's coastal defences preceding the landing of General Eisenhower's forces and warships pounded the enemy from off-shore as landing craft sped up to the island's beaches.

The action came on the heels of a series of Allied air mights over Sicily, constant flights of Allied planes by day and under the powerful blows by day.

(The Algiers radio in a broadcast by U.S. government monitors said landed on the rock-studded island of Pantelleria, 70 miles from Rome.)

BEACHES DIFFICULT

The invasion launched across the 90-mile wide Sicilian strait, came eight months after the Allied forces first landed in North Africa and two months after they had crushed resistance by a quarter million Axis troops in Tunisia.

The Drive That Failed

Of course the invasion of Sicily as a first step toward the invasion of the mainland of Europe was intended to take some more "weight" off Russia, and will do that. But in simple justice to the Red army it should be noted that the Nazi drive at Kursk was stopped and most of the lost territory regained the day before the invading troops landed in Sicily. The Russians stopped that attack and turned back their assailants in their own summer offensive as among his multiplying troubles. He pitted all the force he could muster to smash the threat on his eastern front before the western Allies could launch their blow—and failed because the Russians were able to match strength with strength and beat down the attack.

No Fair, But a Race Meet!

Action of the city council in sanctioning the holding of a 13-day race meet does not line up at all with the action of council which resulted in the cancellation of the Summer Fair. The Fair was struck off the calendar because of the strongly expressed views of members of the council that a race program and Midway shows were unsuitable kinds of entertainment to stage in wartime. The argument was that people who went to the Fair would waste money in betting and buying show tickets; that money would be taken out of the community; that a spending spree was not appropriate at a time when every cent was needed for war purposes; and that the morals or morale of the community would not be bettered by a splurge of the kind.

It is for the aldermen involved in this about-face procedure to explain why this argument was so sound as to demand the cancellation of the greatest agricultural exhibition in western Canada, since it cuts no ice when the proposal is to stage a 13-day race meet. If the finances, morals and morale of the community can stand a race meet, why not the Summer Fair?

V

Going Well

On the fourth day of the invasion Allied forces dominated approximately one-quarter of the island of Sicily. On the left American troops were approaching Agrigento, half-way into the southern coastline while British and Canadians were pushing for Catania, half-way up the eastern coast. The enemy had not been cleared from the area thus enclosed on two sides, but the capture of Ragusa indicated that the forces on the centre were thanking their way inland rapidly. The territory south of a line from Agrigento to Catania comprises about one-third of the island.

It is too much to suppose this rate of progress can be maintained. Somewhere in the path of German and Italian mechanized forces have been massed in powerful concentrations, according to report, probably in favorable country and buttressed by strongly prepared defence works. The speed with which the Allied operations have been carried out however gives confidence of careful planning, in which provision will have been made to have tanks and artillery on the spot when and where the enemy is likely to make a formidable stand. The quick seizure of Gela and of over a hundred miles of coastline gave opportunity to land such weapons and all other needed supplies from the convoy ships which followed the landing barges.

While the future holds the secret of what plans the enemy has made and what surprises he may attempt, the going of the progress of the invasion thus far gives confidence that arrangements were made in advance to deal with whatever tricks he may pull out of the bag.

V

They're Making Money

It is some consolation for taxpayers packed like sardines in the crowded street cars to know that the street railway system is making money. For the five months ending with May the net profits were $15,-649.65, against a loss in the parallel period last year of $20,501.04. Nor was the weather the main factor in bringing about the betterment, because in the relatively pleasant month of May the profits were $2,212.27 against losses in May of last year of $5,248.57. Gain in normal traffic not a rush inspired by low temperatures, must have made the difference.

The improvement over the five month period was more than $35,000. For the single month of May it was more than $7,000. This remarkable change in the financial showing, it is pertinent to remember, was accomplished while maintaining the lowest street railway fares on the continent. Tickets, whether bought in strips of five or in books of 20, sound at five cents each. And for a single ticket a passenger can travel from one end of the system to the other, a distance upward of ten miles. Whether passengers, in whatever numbers, can be carried that distance for five cents each is a moot question. What is obvious, from observation as from the figures cited, is that the short-haul traffic is now large enough to have completely swamped the losses, if any, on long haul traffic.

Whatever discomforts he may suffer in the crowded cars, the taxpayer thus has the satisfaction of knowing that what he pays for the ride is all he will have to pay to keep the cars going, for they are making money, not piling up a deficit to be liquidated. That is some compensation, even for a crushed hat or a trampled corn.

V

A London paper learns that the German high command wants Hitler to get rid of Goering as head of the luftwaffe. Whether or not Herman should be fired, things must have changed somewhat in Naziland if a group of generals now dare to wait on the Corporal and demand the head of No. 2 boss.

V

Many German prisoners recently brought to Canada are said to be only 18 years old, some less than that. One boy claims to be only 13. If they are not lying about their age in hope of arousing pity, the Fuehrer must be facing a manpower shortage. It will not do to build too much on the latter supposition.

V

More than two thousand ships took part in the invasion of Sicily; the largest fleet ever assembled. That sufficiently explains why such large operations planned. It also explains why the invasion did not occur sooner. Action had to wait until the transport was available.

V

An alien enemy rounded up in New York apparently expressed the hopes of eight others when he said he wished Hitler would bomb that city. The Fuehrer—or his advisers—has more sense than his fifth columnists. From his standpoint there are enough American soldiers and ships and planes and tanks and guns heading for Europe now, without his Luftwaffe staging another Pearl Harbor mistake by bombing New York.

V

The Italian high command is said to have declined—with or without thanks—an offer by Rommel to take over the defence of Corsica and the part of the French Riviera occupied by Italian troops. There are internal probabilities in the report. Any Italian would think he knows the territory might as well be handed over to the Allies as to the Nazis, for even in the event of a Hitler victory it would not be given back.

What Is Work?

Editor, Bulletin: No institution that stands for truth (quaecumque vera) can hope to long many friends.—The New Trail, published by the University of Alberta. But does this institution stand for the truth? As far as I can discover, making known the truth is left to you and me and we are poorly equipped to make truths known. I'll challenge any member of the University of Alberta to show me where they have made known such truths as I shall make known in this letter.

In a recent paper was this statement from the University graduate: "Every possible means must be devised to provide work for the thousands of men returning from the armed forces." When the meaning of those words struck the mind of my little girl she laughed so much tears ran down her face.

Of all the stupid statements that are being uttered today, the most stupid is that from university trained minds. Let us have a look at this work business. "Means must be devised to provide work." What is work? The only kind of work I am doing something and only a fool would do something for the sake of doing something. Work is a means to some end. Work is not an end in itself. Work is a means, therefore the idiot who made the above statement must mean "every possible means must be devised to provide means" which is insane.

Had the man said, "Every possible means must be devised to provide leisure" it would have made sense and would have been in the truth. For all living things seek leisure and until human beings recognize this truth, and strive for this end, we can expect only what we have today—fear, worry, wars.

Remember what Social Crediters say, "Toil is work men do because other men make them do it. Work is what men do because nature makes them do it. Leisure is work men do because men want to do it."

Rehabilitation

Editor, Bulletin: The editorial headed "Post-war Education of Veterans" in the Ottawa Journal of the 29th June is a very timely recognition of the vital importance of the United Kingdom in making provision for the training of ex-service men after the war, but I fear the exhortation to the Government of Canada to study this question is somewhat belated, for Britain is, on the other foot. Ever since the Canadian plan to meet this object was definitely instituted on December 1st, 1941, the Governments of the United Kingdom, some of the other Dominions, and the United States have diligently studied our proposals, but so far the Government of United Kingdom is the only one which has seen in part copied the Canadian plan.

It was comparatively early in 1940 that the Rehabilitation Committee of the Ministry of Pensions and National Health, directed the General Advisory Council on Education and Rehabilitation to study and prepare recommendations. The assistance of several of the heads of Canadian universities and other eminent authorities was sought, and their recommendations were incorporated into a complete plan on October 1st, 1941 with the passage of Order in Council P.C. 9633 setting up the Post-Discharge Re-establishment Order.

Provision was made in this Order in Council for any honourably discharged man or woman with a reasonable length of service and the necessary educational qualifications to continue their education in a university or professional school and complete the required courses pending their finding employment in ex-service civil life or pursuing early courses they receive living allowances of $10.20 for a single man or woman and $14.40 for a married man or woman, weekly, with appropriate allowances for children (if such allowances are required), and in addition the full fees of the course are paid to the university. This plan is somewhat wider in coverage and provisions than the proposed British plan.

At the present time there are students in universities in Canada, who have been discharged from the Canadian armed forces and who are in receipt of post-discharge educational grants under the terms of the Order, and they thus do not have to wait until after the war for the provision of educational opportunity.

Taken in conjunction with the provision made in the Post-Discharge Re-establishment Order relative to vocational training, resumed education, assistance to those engaging in business, and to assist the rehabilitation of ex-service men whether they enter urban employment or the development on the land under the Veterans' Land Act and indeed many of those employed in the Civil Service become eligible to combine this with the acquirement of rural homes under the Veterans' Land Act provision.

Indeed as for the question of educational benefits, grants and opportunities is concerned, the problem has more to do with the question of the adequacy of accommodation and the provision of facilities for the large number of our serving sailors, soldiers and airmen who on discharge will wish to avail themselves of the opportunity.

Chairman, General Advisory Committee on Demobilization and Rehabilitation.

Imperialism

Editor, Bulletin: In a recent column in The Bulletin, Mr. Weir made a strong defence of imperialism, but it was a pedestal, not to speak. But is not imperialism identical with militarism against which the United Nations are engaged in a life and death struggle? And have not all imperial nations won their empire by force of arms? Then why defend this system now which has brought Europe to the brink of disaster and our civilization hanging by a thread? All the ancient empires of the past perished miserably, and, went down to oblivion, including the last and greatest, the Roman Empire.

Also I must correct Mr. Weir in his statement that it was the Roman Empire that carried Christianity to the world. This is entirely misleading. It was the Church of Christ established within that Empire that carried the Christian religion to the different parts of the Empire of pagan Rome, until Europe became one vast enclosure of Christian culture and freedom, 1,000 A.D. And all this against the cruel decrees of the Roman Emperors such as Nero, Diocletian and Julian the Apostate, but Christians must be destroyed. "The Christians to the lions" rang down the centuries in the arena of pagan Rome until the first Christian Emperor Constantine ascended the throne in 313 A.D. Who is it that has not heard of the infamies that surround the names of Nero, of Herod, or Pontius Pilate? All Romans.

And as to forms of government in the post-war era, we all believed that it was Democratic, including the autonomy of all small nations, was the goal and aim among the United Nations.

Picnics Are Loathesome, But—!

There Are Many Varieties And I Don't Like Any Of Them

By MARY ALICE QUAYNE

There's no denying it—the picnic season is here again. That gay season is here that is known to millions of rollicking souls.

Already the fun has begun. Just the other day around 4:30 in the afternoon the husband called to say that he had just met Bill and Joe and they thought it was just the night for a picnic, with a nice refreshing hike before eating. This was the first call of the season, but judging from previous summers it won't be the last.

He suggested that it was really too hot to eat. And then in his best salesmanship manner he suggested that I make a big jug of lemonade and bring along those chocolate cookies which I baked yesterday. Then as an afterthought he suggested bringing along the rest of the ham, for which I had squandered all my ration coupons, and a few tins of baked beans. He said the other girls would bring the rest of the meal.

I thought he said it was too hot to eat! However, I muttered weakly that I already had our dinner in the oven.

That remark had the effect of adding fuel to the fire—"Oh, Fine! Fine! I'm just hungry, I am."

From past experience with the slevedore appetites usually prevalent at picnics, I could imagine what a sensational pound of spareribs and the two baked potatoes nestling comfy in our oven would be!

I refer to the "I Bring It" variety of picnic as the "I Bring It" variety.

However, I hardly know which is an evening of fun of the "I Bring It" variety, or the picnic whereby a not-too-intimate friend calls late on Saturday night, "I've already talked to your husband, and he tells me you haven't a thing planned for tomorrow, and that you'll be able to spend the day with us out at the lake."

When such plans are thrust down my throat all I can do is to mutter angrily under my breath. That is one of the times when I wonder if I wasn't foolish to give up my journalistic career. Finally loyalty to my husband wins out, and I manage to ask "What shall we bring?"

"Oh, not a thing! not a thing! I'll take care of everything!"

I protest—he insists—I protest—she insists—and so on, until at last through sheer exhaustion, I give in.

Then next day comes the meal to be long remembered. The hamper cloth is laid as if for royalty. In addition to fried chicken, there are four kinds of vegetables, three varieties of relishes, salad and two kinds of desserts—not to mention various other little delicacies.

That Awful Feeling

The food was superb, but keeping my ear tuned to my not-too-intimate friend's sad tale of how horribly exhausted she is, I cast furtive glances about, as I gallantly reach for another radish rose. I begin to feel as one might who has just neaked out of a restaurant without paying the check.

This dubious form of enjoyment I call the "All We Do Is Eat It" kind of picnic.

The joy and delight of the busy housewife is the "Let's Just Pick Up Something at the Last Minute and Go" variety. What does it matter if the six couples present all happened to bring potato chips? Since we all thought of the same thing, they must be loaded with vitamins!

Then without fail, on the way home and as we pass the hamburger place, my husband will say, "Ah—er—how about a cup of coffee—or something?" He doesn't fool me. I know what he is really interested in is the "something."

Then there's the good old "Let's Appoint a Committee" kind of picnic. This style is the favored picnic. By this method Mrs. Jones is delegated to bring potato salad, Mrs. Smith the wieners, Mrs. Brown the buns and butter because she says she never uses all her butter coupons, and so on.

This variety has its drawbacks for me at least. I have never been on one of these kind where we had all the food contracted for. Either Mrs. Smith doesn't turn up and we eat wieners without buns, or Mrs. Jones brings a pan of lukewarm baked beans, because she forgot what she had promised to bring and she had the oven on and so she produced.

I had thought that this summer would be different. To would-be picnickers I had planned to say politely, "I've got love to go fishing with you but we're not driving our car now."

This argument has already been beaten down with the reply, "Oh, neither are we! We'll take the street car as far as it goes and hike the rest of the way. It's only four miles, and none of us walk enough."

But even though past experience has dwarfed my enthusiasm for picnics I guess we will continue to participate in them in spite of rationing and insects, and to me insects and picnics are synonymous.

All of this is considered by airmen whom I talked with in England and bear no cares for the future on side, namely, that we must destroy the German fighter force because it constitutes the first step toward victory. Tunisia went fast when the Germans lost control of the air. The daily losses of German fighters now probably are the most important bearing on the future course of the war.

Germany placed great faith in air warfare and that she has lost is losing is not because the air does not have value but because the British, who have developed it, did not understand the use of it in the sense that the Americans and British do. Allied Air Superiority Now

Nazi Strength Lies in Fighting Machines for Defence

By RAMOND CLAPPER

ADVANCED BASE IN NORTH AFRICA—A new record in this theatre was set a few days ago when one flying fortress brought down 13 Nazi planes. One gunner alone shot down seven.

Raymond Clapper

Such performance is destined to increase the prestige of the Flying Fortress and cause an early champions to feel vindicated against those engaging in which were heard earlier in the war. On the recent raid a Fortress which fell behind because of damage to one of its engines was pounced on by 15 German fighters. The Fortress fought off the attack, knocked down five, and escaped.

The steady advance in air superiority for the Allies from this is the result not only of the larger Allied production but also of a fundamental mistake in the German conception of air war. While the Americans concentrated on the thoroughly armed Fortress which has 1,600 guns for power the Germans were putting their best efforts into fighters instead of bombers. The fighter is a defensive weapon. The bomber is what carries the war to the enemy. At the same time, the Americans have demonstrated, it can become a powerful means of destroying an enemy fighter force.

Evidently the Germans considered bombing more for its effect on the morale of the enemy than as a military weapon. To the German the bomber was an instrument for terrorizing the civilian population rather than, as the Americans conceive it, an instrument for hitting a military target whether it be an enemy aircraft engine factory, a water works, a railroad freight yards or any other specific military objective.

Against helpless people and helpless communities such as Warsaw and Rotterdam the Germans were able to bomb the cities into a shambles and drive the people out in panic. But Allied airmen consider the German bombing of London was stupid. The target was too large and in spite of severe damage upon it there was too much of London to destroy from the air. The net effect of the destruction was minor and London was in no way made uninhabitable.

Neither did the Germans induce terror and panic but rather the reverse. For the population of London steadily improved its methods of fire fighting and otherwise protected itself. The American airmen who are the developers of precision bombing believe that the Germans might have come close to knocking out England if they ignored London and concentrated on the aircraft factories and airdromes. As it was, the British were able to build up fighter forces that made it too costly for the Germans to persist in mass bombing.

All of this is considered by airmen whom I talked with in England and bear no cares for the future on side, namely, that we must destroy the German fighter force because it constitutes the first step toward victory. Tunisia went fast when the Germans lost control of the air. The daily losses of German fighters now probably are the most important bearing on the future course of the war.

The Yukon a Land of Flowers

FROM
"THE YUKON TERRITORY"

The Yukon is a land of flowers. They grow wild almost everywhere and in great profusion. They are a constant source of delight to the visitor, for their luxuriance, color, and fragrance give an additional charm and beauty to many a lovely scene. They grow in the valleys and on the lower slopes, and even on the higher spaces above timberline they are found in the hardier species that refuse to be beaten back by the temperature and the elements. Nowhere are the wild flowers, trees, ferns and shrubs have been identified in the Yukon.

The colors of the Yukon flowers are mainly blue, pink, and magenta, with a generous touch of yellow in a number of species. Shades of orange and crimson are rare, and species such as Indian paint brush that farther south are so plentiful seem to be confined to cherry, appear in the Yukon in lemon and magenta shades. Characteristic species include arnica, shrubby cinquefoil, marsh marigold, yellow pond lily, Arctic poppy, mustard, yellow violet, golden corydalis, drummond's dryas, locoweed, stonecrop, hawkweed, and monkey flower. The ubiquitous dandelion is found in the Yukon, as is also the eastern fireweed.

In the natural cycle of the seasons the landscape undergoes an almost bewildering change in color. From early Spring, when the dainty pasque flower—known locally as the purple crocus—pushes its head above ground, until the last faded leaves of autumn have fallen down, a constant variety of floral beauty embellishes the countryside. June, acres upon acres of landscape are carpeted with a purplish-blue lupins, broken here and there by the wild Arctic poppy and Jacob's ladder. On the higher slopes are the mountain forget-me-not, mountain harebell, and the mountain cerise shooting star. Lower down grow the wild rose, Dutchman's breeches, bleeding heart—the hairy prototype of the cultivated variety — and many other species that flourish during the long hours of Summer daylight.

Among the distinctive flowers of the Yukon are several varieties of the orchid family. The most common is the wild orchid with large purplish-pink spiotches. It grows on sandy sunny hill-sides, as well as on lower levels. Also found is the Siberian orchid or Franklin's lady's slipper. Occasionally a pure white orchid is discovered, an exquisite single flower standing out like a saint but delicate fragrance. Within a few minutes' walk of Dawson will be found growing the fragrant bog orchid, the fly-like orchid, the dainty coral root, lady's tresses, and calypso.

In the July, distant hills and mountains, road-sides and borders of trail are colored by the gorgeous magenta-purple of the fireweed, which marks the height of Autumn. Later as trees and shrubs change color, Nature adds a final touch to the beauty of the countryside in brilliant shades of scarlet and gold — a closing pageant before the first crystalline flakes of snow begin to fall.

Small Craft

LONDON TIMES

As many as 10,000 small craft drawn from all parts of the country have been acquired by the Ministry of War Transport for various war purposes through requisitioning or purchase.

Some 2,000 of the London swim barges have proved most adaptable craft for all sorts of uses. They are being used today on the West African coast, among other parts of the world. The delivery of many of these craft to new stations overseas has been achieved by fine feats of seamanship. Port tugs, ferries, and even a floating crane, all designed for use in inland coastal waters at home, have made voyages of 12,000 miles around the Cape to the Middle East.

In order to avoid prowling enemy bombers these tiny vessels have had to cross 7,000 miles of the open Atlantic before proceeding down the west coast of Africa. They have suffered no casualties.

Barber Shop Melody

FROM THE LONDON FREE PRESS

Today's young men know nothing of barber shop quartets, save what they hear over the radio or see in radio program. They are much the poorer. Their elders, however, can recall when "Sweet Adeline" prevailed, white and blue pole there was a quartet of the boys—cooks, bakers, engineers, firemen, farmers, barbenders—each harmonized their voices on Saturday nights for the sweet sake of world brotherhood.

All of which is brought to mind by a story out of Chicago recounting the battle of the Worlds Championship Barber Shop Quartet series by the Four Harmonizers after a close battle with the runners-up, the Kansas City Barber Pole Cats. The victors clinched their right to the pennant, or the cup by warbling "The Bowery" and "It's Only An Old Shanty Town". The K.C.B.P.C.s tried their luck with "Daddy Get Your Baby Out of Jail" and "Kentucky Babe', Demos and Orpheus.

It was back in the Gay Nineties, when the song fests were at their best. The cynic will say that they had to be gay to stand it. As a matter of fact they were gay. It was the day of strawberry blondes, picnics, saloons, silk and brocade, of Victor Herbert, Diamond Jim Brady, Lillian Russell, the Hammans, the Ziegfeld Follies, John L. Sullivan—then an ageing relic of the prize ring—and Harry Von Tilzer Ford's new fantasy, the horseless carriage, of Irish American comedians, of Tammany Hall's gala days and of pretzels and a good nickel cigar.

It had its merits. They could at least produce a man to write "And the Band Played On" and a whole nation to enjoy its waltzing melody. We of this machine age have made vast progress in dozens of ways since then but we have not brought to light a happier form of entertainment than the Barber's Shop Quartet nor one that so fully combined in itself the fun spirits of

Before the Magistrate

Pair Sentenced to Jail For Hotel Room Assault

Charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm to George Moen of Cardston, Alta., Hugh McIntyre and Albert L. Lawrence were found guilty by Magistrate A. L. Millar, K.C., and sentenced to five months and four months respectively, Tuesday. The case arose after Moen was allegedly attacked in an Edmonton hotel by the two accused.

Moen told the court that he had met the two accused in a downtown cafe on June 20, and was asked if he played cards as they knew of a man who had $800. He went with them to their hotel about 9 p.m., and shortly after arriving there, he said McIntyre left the room, then returned, only to leave again and almost immediately return.

As he closed the door, McIntyre told his companion there was nobody around and "Let's take him." Lawrence hit him with his fist, said the witness, and at the same time he got a heavy blow from behind. As Lawrence said, "Give us that bankroll", the complainant stated he made a grab for him.

It was then that McIntyre hit him on the head with a liquor bottle, knocking him onto the bed. He called loudly for help, and as the door opened, he "passed out."

Medical testimony showed that the complainant had suffered a wound on the forehead, lacerated right eyebrow, a gouged-out wound at the back of the head, while an X-ray showed a fracture of the skull. The fifth and sixth rib on the right side had also been fractured. the court was told, and the complainant had been in hospital from that night until July 7.

Clerk of the hotel in which the fracas had occurred stated that the two accused had registered as Lawrence and Nelson, and that he had opened the door of the room as they were trying to smother Moen with a blanket. When the latter yelled he had been knifed, witness said he called the police.

Another clerk told the court that all three men had been on the bed when he entered the room with the previous witness, and saw a broken bottle and one other empty one.

Police evidence showed that the complainant had been found covered with blood, with his money loose in his hands. A second officer's witness was to the effect that at the hospital to which they took the injured man, several pieces of glass fell out of his clothing. He had $97 handed to him by the complainant, stated the witness.

McIntyre, in his own defence, admitted registering in the name of Nelson, together with the fact that he had been deported from the States in 1938. He acknowledged two convictions, one at Windsor, Ont., in 1939, for having a revolver in his possession, and at Sidney, N.S., for vagrancy. He said he joined the armed forces three months ago.

He stated he and his companion had been offered a drink by the accusc who said he was a card sharp and well-known in Edmonton. In their room at the hotel, the complainant had grabbed him by the tunic and he had hit him, but not with a bottle. He added that the accused had committed an immoral act in the room, and asked the officers, upon their arrival, if he could lay such a charge against him.

Lawrence admitted he had been in "a jam" a year ago, when he was charged with assault. Another similar charge in the spring of 1943 resulted in his being placed on suspended sentence.

The accused, who admitted being A.W.O.L. said he had been away for four days.

The crown thought the evidence of the two accused should not be believed, that there was most certain evidence of actual bodily harm.

Mr. Millar referred to McIntyre as "a thoroughly bad customer, who was smooth, and who thought he was smart. Lawrence ,continued the magistrate, had not advanced as far as his companion, but added that both were bad characters.

Nick Karacha had shown "no malicious intent" said Magistrate A. L. Millar, K.C., when he found the accused guilty of the charge of dangerous driving at police court Wednesday morning, and fined him $20 and costs or 30 days.

The charge arose after the accused while operating a truck on 104 avenue between 5 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. June 16, struck Miss Jean McIntyre, a cyclist, knocking her to the pavement, and causing fractures to her left arm and left leg.

Miss McIntyre, still wearing a cast, told the court that she and a companion were cycling on 104 avenue when the truck came up beside her. She heard the sound of the horn as the truck came alongside her. She saw a flash of yellow and the next thing she knew she was on the pavement, after having been hit by the side of the truck.

A witness who said he had been driving a car behind the truck, stated he saw the latter pull past the cyclist closely. He had then pulled quickly to the right, striking the girl and throwing her to the pavement.

A police officer giving evidence said he had been told by the accused that he did not know he had struck any one and had gone up toward the freight sheds, where he had stopped, and on getting out of the truck, looked back and saw the girl on the ground and some people picking her up.

The accused said he had seen the bicycle ahead of him and sounded his horn. He did not know he had hit the cyclist until he stopped and looked back.

Two Cars Collide At Intersection

Struck by a westbound auto at the corner of 96 street and 107 avenue at 7:45 a.m. Wednesday, an auto owned by the Franciscan College, North Edmonton, was swung completely around and upset, yet none of the five occupants was injured.

In the college auto, operated by Father Canisius Seiferling, were Father W. Sebastian, Father George Hart, Father O. Tucker, Father A. Mireault and Father U. Ell, all residents of the college.

Driver of the westbound car was Albin F. Ohrn, 10649 95 street, who was accompanied by Joseph Mioura, 10645 95 street; Gordon J. McKinnon, 9329 105 avenue; John H. McKinnon, 9329 105 avenue; John H. McLean, 9537 103 avenue.

Operator of the college vehicle stated he saw the other car as he entered the intersection and expected it to yield the right of way. It continued, however, and struck the left door of their auto. In the impact, the college car was swung around, tipping over onto its right side.

Ohrn stated he had seen a bicycle coming but did not see the other car until he hit the left rear of it.

Northern Bridge Nears Completion

The 2,000-foot suspension bridge to span the Peace River on the Alaska Highway is nearing completion, according to Col. J. P. Glandon, officer commanding the Alaska Military Highway, who is a visitor in Edmonton for a few days. His headquarters is at Dawson Creek.

He said that steelwork on the bridge is practically completed, and building of the concrete deck should start early next week. He anticipates that the bridge will be completed by the end of July. Its completion will remove a serious bottleneck in the transportation problems of the highway, he added.

Rapid progress was being made in the construction of the bridges spanning the Muskwa and the Liard rivers.

14-Year-Old Boy Is Found Dead in Bed

Mike Danyluk, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Danyluk, 12946 55 street, was found dead in his bed about 6 a.m. Wednesday by his father, according to city police. In bed with the dead boy were a brother and a sister.

Father of the youth stated that his son had complained of a headache after having eaten his supper about 7 p.m. Tuesday. About 8 o'clock he went to bed, when cold cloths were applied to his head and his chest rubbed. The boy then fell asleep.

Between 2 a.m. and 3 a.m. Wednesday, Mrs. Danyluk stated she went into the boy's room and found him sleeping. She did not disturb him. At 6 a.m. when Mr. Danyluk went to the room, the boy was dead, lying on his side and face. His brother and sister were asleep beside him.

CALL DOCTOR

Dr. T. H. Ferguld was called, and he instructed the family to notify Dr. E. A. Braithwaite, chief provincial coroner. The latter informed the police department and ordered the body removed.

The Danyluk family arrived in Edmonton from Willingdon Alta., in March last, and had resided at their present address since that time. It was learned that the boy had suffered from heart trouble apparently from birth, and had received medical treatment at Willingdon and Vegreville.

The body was taken to Park Memorial funeral home.

The Bulletin's SPORT SHOW

By Jack DeLong

ELSEWHERE on this page appears the account of an interview we had yesterday with Brig.-Gen. L. D. Worsham, division engineer for the Northwest Division U.S. Army Engineers. He told us of the years spent as director of athletics at West Point Military Academy.

One observation of the general's as being filled with the deepest significance. He observed that care must be taken not to allow rivalry in inter-collegiate competition to develop to an extent where bitterness is engendered.

In other words, competition becomes war when it aims at the extinction of an opponent, even if annihilation is not actually possible under the circumstances.

Up to a point competitive sport strengthens friendships.

Total war is the ultimate in competition. In total war you eliminate all of your competitors. Hitler, Mussolini and that fellow Tojo all decided on this type of competition. But all three are finding they entered a league in which the competition is too stiff.

SATURDAY'S GAME

BILL HARRIS, polite little secretary of the Edmonton Senior Baseball league, informs us that players for the all-star nine, to oppose the Yanks in the Stamp-Out-the-U-Boat Drive game in Renfrew Park Saturday, will be selected after this evening's contest between the league leaders and the Dodgers. This job should have been all done before now, but rain interfered with arrangements for a meeting of club managers, scheduled at Renfrew Park Tuesday evening.

Plans for the game are going ahead apace and a bumper crowd is expected.

Where are the girls of the old brigade? That's what we asked A. R. Lawrence, the "Old Man River" of Edmonton sport, when he dropped in for one of his noontime visits last evening. Incidentally, "A.R." keeps the most awful hours you could imagine. If he shows up at the office before Big Ben has boomed out the solitary stroke of 1.00 a.m. you know he isn't feeling up to snuff. If "A.R." doesn't start keeping better hours he'll never live to be 125 and we warned him about it too. He's nudging the three-score and 10 mark.

HOW ARE THEY DOING

BUT to get back to our little discussion with Mr. Lawrence, now secretary of Boyle Street Girls' Softball League, a circuit that boasts 20 teams, we asked him what has become of the girls who used to be performing brilliantly in the Edmonton Senior Girls' Baseball League. This circuit was in operation back in the rapidly-receding summer of 1932.

The late Joseph Andrew Clarke, three times Edmonton mayor, was president of the circuit and "A.R." was secretary. The girls played to large crowds each time out.

Mr. Lawrence pulled a faded program from his pocket. On it was a photograph of many of the players and officials of the league in 1932.

Then he proceeded to tell us what had become of glamor gals of the Edmonton baseball league.

Babe Daniels is now Mrs. Ralph Morgan of senior baseball fame. Kay Heim is playing pro in the U.S.A. Pat Vint is now Mrs. Money. Rimstad Kay Dawson is Mrs. "Red" Deacon. Helen Cook is living in Vancouver. Margaret Pinkham is still here, and is Mrs. Harris. Gladys Knutson is Mrs. Simonds of Montreal, and Elaine Wrightmill is Mrs. Bell-Irvine of this city.

Mr. Lawrence observed that most of the girls on that team of 1932 had started tossing baseballs around as members of Bill Todd's Queen's Avenue school nine in 1923.

Players come and go but "A.R." just keeps rolling along.

TORONTO, July 14 — (CP) — Lieut. Dick Haughian, former coach and star player with Calgary Bronks in the Western Canada Rugby Football Union, visualizes a post-war grid set-up in which clubs would have their own planes for inter-city transportation.

Dick now is stationed in Vancouver with the Canadian Army. A product of the United States gridiron, he came to Canada from Santa Clara University in California. His post-war football ideas were expressed in an interview with Ken Vancouver Province McConnell.

Haughian approves the idea of team travel by air. There would be no necessity for leaving until just a few hours before the game. Coaching problems, such as a change in drinking water, would be overcome.

"But there would be other headaches," said Haughian. "Some of the guys might not want to travel by air. What do you do then? Send them on ahead by train and leave them to do as they want in a strange city?"

Haughian says football teams of the future will have to operate "on the same lavish scale as the Winnipeg Blue Bombers." In his view, football clubs will have to big against professional outfits for services of high-class playing talent.

"Not A Nickel"

Before the war Bill Stoneham edited the Western Canada Hockey Guide—a hobby which grew from his newspaper job in Saskatoon. Last winter, as Wing Cmdr. D. W. Stoneham, he has been transferred to Toronto and he was induced to comment: "Not a single R.A.F. boy received a nickel extra for playing hockey last winter and no one's training was interrupted because he was a hockey player. That's the way it will be next winter."

Athletic Head at West Point

Sport is Essential to Soldier Says Brig.-Gen. L. D. Worsham

By JACK DELONG

Athletics are absolutely essential to the serviceman. Sports for the boys in khaki simultaneously serve a twin purpose. They are enjoyable recreation and they keep the men in top physical condition.

Brigadier General Ludson D. Worsham, division engineer for the Northwest Division of United States Army Engineers with headquarters at this former Jesuit College, in Edmonton's west end, made these observations during an interview with the writer Tuesday.

And the general, who overseers construction and maintenance of numerous huge war development projects over the vast territory between Edmonton and Fairbanks, is well qualified to speak about the value of sport to the soldier.

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

For four years, from 1932 to 1936 inclusive, Brig.-Gen. Worsham was director of athletics at the famed West Point military academy.

"There are 23 types of sports courses at West Point," said the general.

"Every cadet must take up at least five sports. We like to have him take seven, but five is the minimum," he explained.

"There are the strictly recreational type of game, such as golf and the team game." General Worsham continued.

"While it is not essential that a cadet attain a high degree of skill at any competitive team sport, we insist that him acquire sufficient knowledge to serve as a leader or coach of others, if necessary."

Serving as coach develops qualities of leadership as generals in a military officer.

"Then," he went on" it is necessary to have intercollegiate sport.

"Some of the finest friendships in history have been built through the medium of sport," he said. "Possibly the best example of the friendships builded through intercollegiate sports are those existing from the hockey matches played each winter between West Point and the Royal Canadian Military College at Kingston, Ont.

"We played 13 years before West Point won a match and that was not when I was sports director," the general said.

MUST TAKE CARE

But care must be taken to see that competition does not degenerate to keen that dangerous rivalries develop. General Worsham pointed out.

He added that games have become so strenuously contested that they've lost their true spirit.

Football and baseball are two highly popular competitive team games, played at West Point.

General Worsham himself played football for West Point baseball team back in the last quiet days prior to the First Great War.

"I was never outstanding. I just got by. The deciding factor is that he played third base because "I couldn't run fast enough to play outfield."

In the football contests, West Point has two great traditional rivals, the Navy and Notre Dame University.

"It's a toss-up as to which opponent the West Pointers view as their most deadly rival," General Worsham said.

SAW KNUTE ROCKNE

"I was a cadet in 1913 when Notre Dame played their first football game against the academy. The great Knute Rockne played end for Notre Dame and West Point have the longest continuous intersectional rivalry record in the history of the game. I think the first official football game played at the academy was against the navy back in the eighties," said the general.

War interrupts Army-Navy games a few years.

Although their West Pointers have been wanted by big league baseball clubs it is seldom that a West Point baseball player performs in the majors. The reason is that every West Point cadet is obliged to serve in the army for at least two years after graduation. By that time he is usually considerably in edger matters, it was pointed out.

SPORTS ON HIGHWAY

Sports are carried on by men of the regiments engaged in the construction and maintenance of the great Alaska Highway and other huge war projects, the general told his interviewer.

"In the summer time it is mostly baseball, and every camp site has its baseball league. The special service division of the army provides equipment and facilities and assists in the athletics of each camp. It is absolutely essential that sport be carried on among troops wherever possible."

Volleyball and basketball are also played by the soldiers.

"Sport is a vital necessity for men in the armed services. The morale of the troops in the northwest is good because you don't hear the word morale mentioned. When people talk about morale, that's when it's bad," concluded Brig.-Gen. Worsham, former director of Athletics at West Point.

Declares Sport Vital in Army

Brigadier-General L. D. Worsham thinks sport must be a regular part of the life of the soldier. The General, as division engineer for the Northwest Division of U.S. Army Engineers, has his headquarters in Edmonton. For four years he was director of athletics at one of the world's most famed military academies, that of West Point in the United States.

Barons Want N.H.L. Franchise

BASKATOON, July 14.—(CP)—Cleveland Barons are willing to accept a National Hockey league franchise for the 1943-44 season, but first must obtain approval of the N.H.L. and then they must obtain the consent of the American Hockey league, Walter Buch, Barons' owner, in an interview here last night.

Buphin is making a tour of Western Canada with his coach, Bill Cook.

Sulphin said the Barons' application will be dealt with by the N.H.L. governors at a meeting in Toronto within the next two weeks. Then he will present his case to the A.H.L. a few weeks later.

The Cleveland owner emphasized that the Barons will not take an N.H.L. berth unless the A.H.L. approves of their action.

Junior Circuit Takes Lead on Doerr's Homer

By JUDSON BAILEY

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, July 14.—(AP)—The American League continued its mastery over the National League Tuesday night with an authoritative 5-3 triumph in the 11th annual all-star game before 31,938 fans.

The senior circuit representatives outhit their rivals 10-8 and stole the pitching spotlight as Lefty Johnny Vander Meer, second of four hurlers used by Manager Billy Southworth, fanned six batters in 2 2-3 innings.

But they never were able to catch up after Bobby Doerr hit a three-run homer off Mort Cooper in the second inning and as a result Cooper, the ace St. Louis Cardinal, was charged with his fourth failure in four trials against American League slugging.

Emil (Dutch) Leonard of Washington started for the American League and was credited with the victory. He gave up a run on two singles and a fly in the first frame, but allowed no further hitting in the three chapters he worked.

Lefty Hal Newhouser of Detroit followed with three more scoreless stanzas before turning the game over to Cecil (Tex) Hughson of Boston Red Sox at the beginning of the seventh. By that time the American Leaguers had a 5-1 advantage and the fact that the Nationals added a run in the seventh through a triple by Vince DiMaggio and another in the ninth on a home run by DiMaggio, star centre fielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, did not change the complexion of the game.

In the previous dream games when the American League built up a big margin of seven victories to three defeats, it almost always was "the New York Yankees against the rest of the National League." Last night not a single one of the American League champions got into the contest.

The National League began confidently with a run in the first inning against Leonard.

But after Hack and Billy Herman had singled and a fly by Stan Musial had brought Hack home, Leonard baffled the Nationals until he gave way to Newhouser at the start of the fourth inning and Pitcher Vince DiMaggio they stayed bewildered for the remainder of the struggle.

The Pittsburgh Pirate star, one of the famous DiMaggio baseball family of big league fame, came into the contest in the fourth inning with a single and then greeted the National League's two closing runs with a triple in the seventh and a home run in the ninth, both off Hughson.

Although Leonard received credit for the victory, the pitching star of the game and the favorite of the fans was Vander Meer of Cincinnati Reds, who was the National League hurler who made the 138 all-star game the year of his double no-hit feat.

Vander Meer struck out six and caught two in a double play to account for eight spectacular outs.

His performance gave him a total of 14 strikeouts in all-star competition and tied a record made by Carl Hubbell of New York Giants.

Vern Stephens Again Leads Batsmen in American League

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP)—Vern Stephens is showing the way for American League batsmen again after two weeks of dueling—first with Oris Hockett of Cleveland and then with rookie Guy Curtright of Chicago's White Sox.

The St. Louis Browns slugger boosted his average three points to .336 in the week's play. Curtright, last week's pace-maker, watched his percentage shrink to .333 but clung to second place.

Hockett, meantime, who tied Stephens two weeks ago and then dropped to third, fell another notch. He exhausted places with Dick Wakefield. Detroit rookie, whose average jumped at .322 while Hockett slipped six points to .321.

The other top ten hitters were Luke Appling, Chicago; Jeff York Etten, New York and Pinky Higgins, Detroit, .293. Bob Johnson, Washington, .288, Chet Laabs, St. Louis, .284, and Doc Cramer, Detroit, .286.

Young Orval Grove of Chicago White Sox took over the lead among pitchers when Milo Candini of Washington saw his undefeated streak broken. Grove's one-hitter last week gave him his seventh win against no defeats.

Stephens in addition to regaining the batting lead, displaced the injured Charley Keller of New York as the home run leader with 12.

Spotlighting The Sport Girl

By SUSIE Q

Who originated the word "comeback" in sport? The telegraph wire informs us that Stella Walsh won a world's pentathlon record in sprints, high jump, shot-put and javelin throw at an Ohio track meet the other day.

* * *

And Bake Dekrickson is to offer an exhibition of her athletic skill at a Vancouver track meet of the Caledonian Games Society next month.

When Freda Savona, a visiting basketball player, participated in a ball game at Boyle street grounds in Edmonton, one afternoon several years ago, the hundreds of spectators cheered most lustily and, according to my informant, seemed very satisfied that they had seen an action, the best girl ball player ever to appear in Edmonton. Not forgetting an unpleasant after episode which doubtless was due mainly to a somewhat notorious manager of an American team, yet Edmonton fans wondered when reading a newspaper dispatch from Chicago to the effect that Savona, erstwhile of the New Orleans Jax team was not considered the "type" of a girl desired in the Wrigley girls' professional softball league around Chicago.

Now comes a printed item in Bobbie Rosenfeld's column in the Toronto Globe & Mail, that she had received from Miss Savona, a copy of a letter claimed to have been signed by the president of the Wrigley league, offering top salary to Miss Savona and even a large increase to act as girl player scout during the times she was not playing. Miss Savona claims that she replied: "I am fairly well fixed at the Jackson Breweries, where I work."

Miss Rosenfeld comments further: "Guess that's the answer to why one of the greatest girl softballers in the game today isn't doing her stuff with the pros. And even though $4,000 isn't to be sneezed at, we know that some of the sponsors of girls' softball in the United States do go all out in the matter of jobs and salaries for the playing rights of the topnotchers."

And how jealousy, intrigue and cliques do appear in sport. A letter from Toronto comments on the spring organization of their leading girls' softball league where four teams wanted to freeze out a fifth lineup. Publicity, much of it unpleasant; legal advice; threatened lawsuit and finally the ice attempt for 1943 was floated, but this letter states that there is a heavy undercurrent and plans for next year already undertaken.

Showing this letter to a present softball official here in Edmonton, we were entertained with a graphic description of how a leading girls' coach was frozen out of handling a team here in Edmonton some time ago. And the description went on to mention names of girl players who had stated that they would be glad to play for this coach in question, but who, in order to play softball at all, practically had to step down a peg and take what chance there was.

* * *

This same official showed us an official letter from the Chicago office of the American Softball Association, indicating that the two Edmonton girls, Annabelle Thompson and Helen Nichol, had been suspended from amateur ranks along with a list of others for playing professional softball. This official then went on to state that the Edmonton Softball League (girls) was a part of the western Canada association of leagues and was not affiliated with eastern Canada nor with the American Softball Association. The local fastball league does not include the word amateur in its title, nor does it claim to be semi-pro as some sports do. The official finished up with a somewhat bright remark that if we went to games and paid our admission and saw the game for the admission, any interest we might have in what became of the money was none of our business. If it went to sponsors or officials or players or anyone it was done by customers' free choice. And that's that.

Had the chance to look over some of the Income Tax forms and the various X, Y, Z, paragraphs. Also reading over an Ottawa letter that "WHERE IT HAS BEEN FOUND by the Department of National Revenue that players were receiving some monetary consideration in addition to travelling expenses," etc. We called a 16-year-old neighbor lad into consultation. His comment: "No foundation! The governments seems short of manpower and is now calling we boys." What a headache.

Error Is Costly To A.O.S. in Service Fastball

No. 4 I.T.S. scored two runs in the ninth inning to tie the count and then rallied for four in the eleventh to beat No. 2 A.O.S. 6-2 in an Inter-Service Fastball League game.

It enabled the I.T.S. Airmen to hold the lead with 9 wins and only one loss.

In the ninth frame, Hall, first man up, was retired at first. Sellers, second batter, was struck out and then McLeod was fanned, but managed to get to first when the A.O.S. catcher dropped the ball and then threw wide of first. McLeod went to second on Grant's surprise bunt and scored along with the latter on Cochran's line drive through shortstop to make it 2-2.

Ernie Coleman turned in a tight game for the winners, allowing four hits and striking out 16 while Green was charged with 8 safeties while hurling for A.O.S.

Attorney Wins In Grand Circuit

CLEVELAND, July 14.—(AP)—Attorney, crack two-year-old racing son of Volomite, went one up on his arch-rival, Good Bye, with a straight-heat victory in the $5,106 Geers Stake, feature of the Grand Circuit program at North Randall Park yesterday.

A winner over Good Bye in their first meeting here but soundly beaten when next they dueled, Attorney had no trouble as Art Blackwell drove him to his second triumph of the season for the Wilcko farms of Logansport, Ind. Good Bye placed in each of the heats, twice finishing two lengths behind.

None More Popular In and Out Of Baseball Than Mike Donlin

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK, July 14.—There never was a more popular figure in and out of baseball than Michael J. Donlin. A good looking Irishman with a winning smile, Mike Donlin was a personality kid who knew a million and one people, including the best.

Colorful Turkey Mike Donlin, a tremendous attraction at the Polo Grounds, was a man about Broadway, fitted right into the Big Stem, loved it. He hobnobbed with sports and actors, was one of the mob. He hung around the old Metropole, where everybody worth while hung out.

A grand mixer and two-fisted drinker, although never a drunkard, Donlin was the life of the party, held the center of the stage. There never was a dull moment. He told a story better than he knew, struck a neat barber shop chord with a pleasing voice, played practical jokes, was a great kidder.

Donlin was one of John McGraw's favorite players and well he should have been. With the immortal pitcher, Christy Mathewson, he helped make the Giants a power.

A left-hand batter and thrower standing five feet nine and weighing 160 pounds, Donlin was one of the top hitters of the period, swatted a long ball knew what it was all about. Pep personified and a fighter from way back, he was of fair speed, had the knack of getting around the bases. He was a ball hawk in center field and a strong and accurate arm swung from his shoulder.

BROKE IN AS A PITCHER

Donlin was born in Erie, Pa., where as a youngster he attracted attention as a pitcher while working at his trade, which was that of a machinist.

Of a roving disposition, Donlin drifted to southern California, where he southpawed for the Los Angeles club in 1897. In 1898-99, he pitched and batted the Santa Cruz club to a place among the leaders, was purchased by the St. Louis Nationals.

Turkey Mike

He did not make good as a pitcher and did not keep in condition, but his batting, fielding and natural ability caused experts to predict he would star. He batted .401 for Santa Cruz, .329 in the National League.

In the years he played from 1899 to 1914, when he slumped to .161, Donlin batted better than .300 in every other campaign except 1902, when he hit .294. He left a major league lifetime average of .332, and was the timely type who moved up in a clutch.

Donlin switched to Baltimore and the American League with McGraw in '01, when he was among the batting leaders of the new circuit with .340 and stole 32 bases.

McGRAW'S FIRST CHAMPS

For other than a baseball reason, Donlin was back in the National League with Cincinnati in '02, remained there until McGraw brought him to the Giants in '04. He was a bulwark of McGraw's first championship team in '04 and helped Little Napoleon to the world championship in '05, when Matty Thrice blanked the Athletics.

The Giants were never out of the first division while Donlin was on the payroll, not even when he returned for brief encores.

Had Donlin taken baseball more seriously earlier, there is little doubt that he would have gone down in history as one of the finest of them all. He was one of the more natural hitters.

One of his outstanding feats at bat was performed while with the Baltimore Americans, June 24, 1901. He hit Miller of Detroit for two triples, two doubles and two singles in six trips.

FOUND GAME HAD CHANGED

Donlin married Mabel Hite in '08, toured in vaudeville with his talented wife. He rejoined the Giants in '11, was released to the Braves shortly thereafter, was with the Pirates in '12. The Phillies took him on waivers that fall, but he refused to report. Released in the middle of the campaign of '13, he joined Jersey City, was returned to the Giants in '14. In '17 Donlin became manager of the Memphis club at a salary of only $2,000. That arrangement did not last out the season and was his last in baseball. Thereafter he devoted himself to the stage and pictures.

I visited the Polo Grounds with Donlin just before McGraw gave up in '32 and a year or so before Turkey Mike died in his sleep of a heart attack in Hollywood.

Donlin couldn't stand it, had to leave.

They weren't the Giants of Turkey Mike Donlin's day.

Play Postponed Game Tonight

An untimely shower washed out the scheduled Senior City Baseball League fixture between U.S. Army and the Dodgers at Renfrew Park Tuesday. The contest will be played this evening, it was announced by League Secretary Bill Harris. As usual, hostilities are due to commence at 7 o'clock.

The Dodgers held the league leading airmen to a 3-3 tie the last time the clubs tangled. Dodgers need a win in the worst way at this stage of the league race. The Yanks are a bit uneasy at the top of the ladder and will be out to draw away from the pack now snapping on their heels. There should be some exciting happenings.

Many Colleges Abandon Football

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—With the east and south topping the list, close to 200 United States colleges, large and small, have abandoned football for the duration of the war.

A survey by The Associated Press Tuesday showed that 189 colleges have felt the drain of manpower and transportation problems to such an extent that they will not attempt to play the game until after the war.

The list is expected to be increased considerably by September.

The survey showed 61 schools had dropped the sport in the east, 49 in the south, 34 in the southwest, 26 in the mid-west, 10 in the Rocky Mountain area and nine on the west coast. The latter does not include California's many junior colleges, practically all of which will not field teams this fall.

SOLDIER OF THE SOIL

THIS year the Canadian Farmer urgently needs help. He needs your help to produce the food so necessary for victory. Many thousands of farm workers are serving in the Forces, so that the farmer—the Soldier of the Soil—is shorthanded, but shorthanded as he is, he is called upon to produce more food than ever before. Food is one of the most powerful weapons of war. Grains, eggs, bacon, beef, fruit, vegetables—FOOD to feed our armies, our allies and our people we must have.

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

You may be a school teacher, student, business or professional man, an office or store clerk—no matter what you are, if you have a few hours, days, weeks, or months of free time this summer, you can do your country and the farmer a great and patriotic service by helping out on the farm. You may be inexperienced, but you still can help. You will find work on the farm healthy and congenial. It will give you the satisfaction of feeling that you have brought Victory nearer.

What you should do NOW!

Consult any special local committee or office established to deal with farm labour placements in your city or town; or Write the Director of the Dominion-Provincial Farm Labour Program at the capital of your province; or Get in touch with your nearest Employment and Selective Service Office.

Swift Knockout Of Enemy Forces On Sicily Seen

By LEWIS HAWKINS

LONDON, July 14.—(AP)—While the combined Allied forces bit deeper into southeastern Sicily, fresh British landings near Catania brought into sharp focus last night the attackers' chance for a swift knockout of the island's defenders by a drive across a vital supply line running through Messina.

Given a foothold on the plain of Catania, Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's men might cut northwest across it to the Tyrrhenian Sea, which is only about 31 miles from the western edge of the plain.

ALTERNATIVE ROUTE

An alternative route directly up the coast to Messina leads along a narrow coastal strip between Mount Etna and the Mediterranean, which is probably easy to defend but which might be a feasible path, with close support from the sea, if the enemy's air strength were beaten down sufficiently. Given such conditions, additional landings might be made along the coast between Catania and Messina to take defence posts in the rear.

More immediate fruits of a drive into the Catanian Plain would be a knockout of the island's greatest collection of air fields around Gerbini, about 15 miles in from the east coast.

With this threat to the Gerbini fields developing and with Canadians and Americans perhaps already taking over Comiso field near jointly-captured Ragusa, the enemy's crippled air arm seemed approaching paralysis in the eastern and southeastern part of the island.

APPROACHES SEALED

With Allied sea and air power cutting off all island approaches except the narrow strait at Messina, any breaking of this supply line was seen in London as likely to seal the doom of the defending armies—perhaps within a few days after the arteries were cut.

Direct Subsidy Is Urged For All Wood Producers

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—Delegates to the eastern agricultural conference yesterday passed a resolution suggesting that the Federal Government to avert a serious fuel shortage next winter, should pay a direct subsidy to all wood producers whether or not they sell through a dealer.

The delegates, representing the five eastern provinces and several western provinces, said a coal shortage faces Canada next winter and if wood is to be used as a fuel substitute "now is the time to act."

Nazis Won't Send Additional Troops To Assist Italy

LONDON, July 14.—(CP)—The Morocco radio, quoting Turkish circles, said last night that the Germans apparently have no intention of sending further reinforcements to Italy but instead will concentrate their forces on frontiers likely to be threatened after Italy is defeated.

Reports from Istanbul, the radio added, also said that the entire civilian population of the island of Crete has been evacuated by the Germans.

AN ALLIED COMMAND POST IN NORTH AFRICA, July 14.—(AP)—Supplies have been unloaded by the Allies for the civilian population of southeastern Sicily, it was announced last night.

City Threatened

First Major Sicilian Battle Expected on Catanian Plains

By LOUIS HUNTER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 14.—(CP)—The first major battle on Sicily, it appeared last night, may be fought on the plains of Catania where the Axis defenders would have every opportunity to use the strength Mussolini has boasted Sicily possesses.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's 7th combined British-Canadian force has rushed up the east coast from its landing bridgeheads on Pachino peninsula through Syracuse and into Augusta, threatening the city of Catania.

Frontline reports have indicated the next move for that part of Montgomery's army is a fanning out onto the Catania plain.

It is noted that the coastal edge of that plain runs for about 15 miles south of Catania.

NEW TROOPS AVAILABLE

Not only the combined force that took Syracuse and Augusta, but also troops that were landed from the sea on that coast, would be available to the British general should he turn westward and drive over the plain.

Reports from the "central front"—the sector in the southeast corner of the island—said yesterday Canadians and Americans made a junction at Ragusa, the Americans arriving in the outskirts of the town just ahead of the first Canadians.

Italy has airports in the Ragusa area. One of these is at Comiso, about seven miles west of Ragusa. If these airports can be captured and put into condition by the Allies they will provide advance bases for Allied aircraft, most of which now must cross from North Africa.

PROBABLY CUT INLAND

The Ragusa junction may have been achieved by the Canadians moving westward along the south coast from Cape Passero and then inland. Considered more likely, however, is that they aided in the sweep up to Syracuse and then cut inland.

Palazzolo, which yesterday's communique announced was in Allied hands, is the farthest point from the coast taken by invading forces. It meant the Allies have penetrated 20 miles north and west from their Pachino bridgehead. Palazzolo is an important road junction of great strategic importance.

Yesterday's reports from the front mean the invading forces are now within 130 miles or so of battlefront, with the Canadians holding the centre but also taking part in the drive up the east coast.

Japs Warned Grew Of War With U.S. In Spring of 1941

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—Former Ambassador Joseph C. Grew said here last night that as early as the spring of 1941 Japan's foreign minister had warned him that if the United States got into a shooting war against Germany "even in defence against the German submarines," Japan would be obliged to go to war against the United States.

The "shooting war" against German submarines began in September, 1941. Japan attacked at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7.)

In an address at Columbia University Grew described a conversation he had with Yosuke Matsuoka, then foreign minister, in the spring of 1941. He said Matsuoka told him democracy was bankrupt and that "this is the day of the great military powers."

Teachers Request Ottawa to Modify Job Freeze Order

Disadvantages Outlined In A.T.A. Communication To Minister of Labor

According to John W. Barnett, secretary-treasurer of the Alberta Teachers' Association, the executive of that body has instructed him to send a communication to Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, minister of labor at Ottawa, embodying the Alberta teachers' attitude to the recent order-in-council freezing teachers to their jobs. This order provides that any teacher who worked as such for one week during the month of April may not seek employment in any other field.

It is pointed out that the teachers are fully in accord with the Dominion government in it's effort to do something about the profession which has become dangerously depleted. However, they feel that the step taken by the government will largely be frustrated unless subsidiary orders-in-council or amendments are issued.

The teachers' economic status, relative to all other workers in the province, is progressively declining and that, except in rare cases, wages for manual labor are altogether higher on the average than those paid to teachers, it was stated.

FARM WAGES HIGHER

Latest returns of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reveal that the average wages paid for farm labor in this province at the present time is $1,055.52 per year, whereas the average salary of rural teachers for the past year was considerably less than $900 per year.

It seems that unless the question of the low economic status of teachers is dealt with it will result in the teachers already in the profession laboring under a sense of grievance and the decline of entrants into the profession will become more marked, it was stated.

A second document has been forwarded to the Hon. Mr. Mitchell in which the A.T.A. has asked for interpretation of several clauses of the order in council.

In a great many cases teachers, owing to ill-health or other substantial reasons had resigned their positions before the order-in-council was issued. Many of them are in the difficult position of having sold their belongings prior to making a move and are now unable to carry their plans through. In one or two cases teachers have doctors' certificates proving they are unable to continue with their work but under the present order they are unable to seek employment anywhere else.

With reference to temporary employment during the long vacation it is pointed out that many teachers have come to the large centres of the province to secure positions. They find that the Selective Service officers have no offerings for employment which it is feasible or possible for the teachers to accept.

RESTRICTIONS FOR JOBS

On the other hand, in Edmonton in particular, American firms engaged with construction work on the Alaska Highway and in the North-West are eager to employ these men and women whose educational qualifications are suited to the type of work and would do so except for the present restrictions applied to Canadian citizens available for employment.

The teachers are asking the Dominion government to set a reasonably high ceiling on teachers' wages and that the order-in-council governing payment of cost of living bonus be made applicable to persons engaged in teaching.

A downtown cafe proprietor told city police Tuesday evening that a customer had eaten a meal and then refused to pay for it. The customer, a half-breed woman, replied that she hadn't eaten a meal. The proprietor declared she had eaten it and then had fallen asleep. Police authorities heard the story, saw the customer pay for her forgotten meal, and returned to headquarters to report the incident. Report ended with the words "all was O.K."

Agnes Lottie Heine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Heine, of 9525 106A avenue, died at her home on Tuesday. She is survived by her parents and two brothers. Wilfred and Walter, both at home. Nearly half an inch of rain fell in Edmonton late Tuesday afternoon when a sudden summer storm struck the city. Many garden plants were crushed by the driving rain, and a few flashes of lightning accompanied the storm, but no hail fell about an hour. A steady rain continued in the evening. High reading Tuesday was 76, and early Wednesday the temperature was 52. An official forecast indicated more showers are in store for this district.

AB. John V. Schiller, son of Mrs. Eliza Schiller, 11117 107 avenue, is now presumed dead after being washed overboard from a Canadian destroyer during a storm early this year. The information was received from a Royal Canadian Navy official casualty list released Wednesday. AB. Schiller was born here and attended Grandin school. He enlisted in the navy as an ordinary seaman in 1940. His brother, Lawrence, is also in the navy, and he has three brothers and four sisters living in Edmonton.

Five Albertans Arrive in City With Army Show

The Canadian Army Show with a cast ready to entertain and just as well prepared to fight, if the occasion arises, arrived in Edmonton Wednesday morning from British Columbia where the boys and girls have been entertaining troops in British Columbia army camps.

The entertainers are here to play to the troops and show Edmontonians what the army can do in the way of building a show. And that they have produced a show of Broadway quality is indicated by the success it has had from coast-to-coast, for seldom in Canada has a show received such a rousing reception. And not only from Canada, but in the United States as well, for the Army Show has received offers to play New York and in America's largest cities and has tempting offers from Hollywood.

The cast of more than 100 soldiers and members of the C.W.A.C. all trained soldiers, were one different in appearance from any other crack unit.

Maj. Victor George, commanding officer of the unit, and Capt. William Wren, aministration and training officer, do not forget the need of training soldiers while conducting the show on its Canadian tour.

SAME DISCIPLINE

"The personnel live under the same army discipline as any other member of the forces, and take their lectures while travelling," Capt. Wren said. "We carry with us not only a fine show but also a Canadian Army unit armed and ready to fight."

The show carries all its own properties, including its own lighting and sound equipment. The portable stage has been erected at the area and is said to be one of the most unusual of its kind ever built.

Containing all the advantages of the largest theatre stage, it is said to transform a drill hall or an arena into the appearance of a Broadway theatre. This entire stage was designed and constructed by the technical crew of the Army Show.

FIVE ALBERTANS

Five Albertans, Privates Joe Duff, Frank Hosek, Eileen Mahon, L/Cpl. Frankie Cassidy and Sergeant Glen Burns, arrived with the unit this morning.

Sgts. Johnnie Wayne and Frank Shuster along with Capt. Robert Farnon and Capt. Rai Purdy, arrived last night from Vancouver, where the two sergeants have been re-writing some of the show in anticipation of its eventual showing overseas. Captain Farnon is musical director and Captain Purdy, producer of the Army Show radio unit. The Army Show will play to the troops at the arena Wednesday night and to the general public Thursday and Friday.

Worthless Cheque

A. H. Behrens, proprietor of the Broadway cafe, informed police authorities Tuesday that a cheque for $10, which he had cashed for a stranger, was worthless. The cheque, drawn on a local bank, was dated July 8. The bank had no knowledge of any account in the name of the signator. The cafe proprietor said he could not describe the man.

THE QUESTION

After Sicily, then what?

THE ANSWERS

HAROLD SNOW, clerk: Right on Rome, I'd say. Sicily is just a short distance from the Italian mainland, and with it in our hands the Allies could easily invade Italy. I think the surrender of Italy would bring realization to all Germans that fate, in the persons of huge Allied armies, is encircling their country on all sides.

RONALD ROSS, clerk: Well, why not just sit tight and give Benito some block-busters as a daily memento that his African empire turned out to be stepping-stones to the ruin of his own country? I don't think there would be any need to invade Italy immediately—she could be scientifically bombed out of the war with a large base like Sicily in Allied hands. According to the columnists, it won't take much bombing.

MRS. S. LLOYD, housewife: I think Italy should be overrun by the Allies, and the whole country put to work for our armies . . . and let the German people know what is in store for them, sooner or later. With Italy in our hands, and Russia to the east, and Britain to the northwest, Germany could be pounded so hard with bombs the Nazis would soon lose heart. Terrific bombings would make real invasion easier, wouldn't it?

Girl in Hospital: Walks Into Truck

Isobel Gow, 17 years old, of 12046 93 street, was in hospital Wednesday as a result of an accident during Tuesday evening's heavy downpour of rain. The girl was reported hurrying across 100 street at Jasper avenue with an umbrella held in front of her, when she ran into a truck loaded with more than three tons of coal. Driver of the vehicle was Aldrich J. Martin, Gwynne, Alta.

Martin reported to authorities that he had travelled south on 100 street and stopped at Jasper avenue before crossing. He saw the girl when she was practically beside the truck, and he immediately put on his brakes. At the time the girl ran into the left side of the vehicle, just back of the cab. She fell to the pavement and was picked up and taken to Royal Alexandra hospital by a passing motorist.

Examined at hospital, Miss Gow was found to be suffering from shock. When interviewed by city police she stated she could not remember anything from the time she got on a street car at 95 street and 118 avenue at 5.15 until she was in the hospital.

Officer Signs Name 60,000 Times Here

Thirty-two signatures on the documents of each applicant enlisted by the air force is the daily "hand" ache of the officers at No. 3 Recruiting Centre, R.C.A.F., Edmon. Multiply this by the total enlistments for each day, say 30 (that is not the correct figure but it will be by the censor) and add the multitude of signatures required in duplicate for all correspondence and you have a well developed case of writer's cramp. But despite the repetition, the officers are happy about it all. "Every time I sign my name thirty-two times, we have another airman to throw eggs at Hitler" said one officer at the Centre.

Flight Lieutenant W. C. M. Barrell, who has been at the recruiting centre here for the last 18 months estimates he has signed his name no less than 60,000 times, but says he "that is the least of our worries . . . we will gladly sign if the boys and girls continue to come in for enlistment.

The chances are that the number of signatures this month will hit an all time high as there are over 400 openings available for duty and the officers are hopeful that all will be filled.

Men and women are given the chance to keep the officers in practice by applying for enlistment in any of the 40 trades now open.

J. L. Moritz, formerly of Edson, and now resident at the Castle hotel, told city authorities late Tuesday night that he had not heard from his sister-in-law, Mary Marion, since May 12 when she left Vegreville and was thought to have come to Edmonton. He described her as being 24 years old, five feet four inches tall, weight 125 pounds. She

Police Capture Escaped Youth In Auto Chase

A five-mile race at 60 miles-an-hour, with an escaped youth in a stolen auto pursued by a traffic officer on motorcycle, ended about 12:10 noon, Tuesday, with the apprehension of Paul Rosahan, 18 years old, and escapee of a pair who escaped from Oliver mental institute on July 5. The other youth was arrested under arrest last week-end after he had been found in a reportedly stolen car.

Effecting the capture after the fast ride over unusually rough roads was Constable Robert Hughes of the city police force, who, with Constable J. A. Cookson, was dispatched to 118 avenue near St. Albert road upon receipt of word that a stolen auto was approaching the city.

CAR STOLEN TUESDAY

The auto, owned by an Edmonton physicina, had been reported as having stolen about 7 a.m. Tuesday.

The two officers, separated by approximately half a mile, were keeping a watch on the roadway when a car was seen coming off a trail between the two of them. Brandishing a revolver plain as the vehicle passed him, Constable Hughes shouted to the driver to stop. The latter responded by "stepping on the gas."

Starting his motorcycle, the officer followed the auto, which was travelling west, a distance of almost five miles. At 60 miles an hour the car disappeared from his sight, said the officer, and he was forced to follow the trail of dust. When he suddenly saw heavy marks leading south, he turned and followed them. He was about half a mile along the trail when he met the car returning. The road had turned out to have a dead-end on it.

Unable to get by, the motorist stopped the car. Asked what mischief was the driver said he was Ronahan. Asked if he was having a joy-ride, he replied "yes." Asked where he had got the car, the youth police stated, said he had stolen it.

Leaving the motorcycle there, Constable Hughes drove the auto and the youth to the police station.

Asked if he had seen the constable waving at him to stop, the boy admitted he had. Asked why he hadn't stopped, he replied he didn't want to.

Both Ronahan and his companion disappeared from Oliver July 5, it was stated, at which time they used a bicycle with which to come into Edmonton. Soon after, several auto thefts were reported to police authorities. One of these, belonging to John Michaels, of Mike's newsstand, and another taken from Edmonton Beach, were recovered.

It was in the second vehicle that a quantity of clothing was found when the car was located on Monday near the High Level bridge. The second youth, found driving the Michael's car, was also thought to be connected with the theft of the second one.

City Soldiers Take Gas Drill At Sarcee Camp

Edmonton soldiers were among 22 officers and 73 other ranks, from units of the Reserve Army, who went through gas chamber and experienced the "DM" nose gas during gas drill at Sarcee Camp near Calgary on Monday.

"Your head will ache. Your jaws will ache. Your teeth will ache. You'll drool. You'll feel like an iron band is being tightened around your chest—but it will all be perfectly harmless."

That was the word picture given the men as in groups of 12 the officers and men went into the gas chamber. For two minutes they were there with respirators on. For the next two minutes they had their respirators off and felt the effects of a war gas they will never forget. Then they marched for 12 minutes with respirators on.

Purpose of the lengthy period with respirators adjusted, was explained to the men. It is a safety measure—even if they feel ill and have a desire to remove the respirators—for the enemy invariably follows a "DM" gas attack with an attack of choking gas, just at the time the men have a strong desire to remove their respirators.

HERE ARE SOME

Among the officers who went through the "DM" test were Capt D. E. C. Campbell, Lt. J. N. Davidson, Lt. C. McLeod, Lt. D. Roberts and Lt. J. B. Denley of Edmonton; 2-Lt. E. D. Waines, Calgary; 2-Lt. W. Redman of Bassano; 2-Lt. B. C. Downey, Carstairs; 2-Lt. T. H. Symons, Stettler; 2-Lt. P. R. Elliott, Allanow; 2-Lt. H. Earle, Calgary; 2-Lt. M. M. Cunningham, Red Deer; Sgt. Maj. Norman Hides and Bombardier Don Wares, Calgary; Bombardiers Nelson, O'Neil and Snell of Calgary, Sgt. Clark of Clunz; Sgt. Denny of Gleichen, L/Bombardier Mathison of Gleichen; Gunner Stewart of Hussar, and Gunner Watwood of Shouldice.

Artillery batteries went into action, Monday afternoon, on the Sarcee Reserve with the 20th Field Battery, R.C.A., from Lethbridge starting off the competitive artillery shoot between the four batteries in camp. The 61st Battery, Edmonton, followed them while the 23rd Battery of Calgary and the 22nd Battery of Gleichen fired Tuesday.

In Gas Drill

Workers Seeking Pay Equalization

Application was made to the Western War Labor Board by Canadian employees of Bechtel, Price, Callahan, American contracting firm engaged on northern war projects, for pay for similar work on the same basis as that paid to Americans employed by the firm.

S. H. McCuaig, K.C., representing the Canadian employees, told the board that wages paid to Canadian employees were from 33 and one-third to 50 per cent lower than paid Americans in the different employment categories.

Representatives of Bechtel, Price, Callahan intimated that any award made by the board would be implemented. The hearing is proceeding.

Africa Waits

By ACHMED ABDULLAH

THE STORY: Lincoln Elliot, American, decides to leave one last fling at adventure before settling down to his important duties as the newly-appointed military governor of a French colony in Central Africa. Disguising himself as the Arab, Terek el-Mastagan, he seeks out the chief Arab lodge of Si Hassanyieh, of which he had once been a member. Sitt Fosiha, who had been his first love, and the old chief, Ali el-Andalosi, welcome him back. They confide a plot against the government, ask that he help by carrying a message to the hykmoot amees, prime mover of the conspiracy.

CHAPTER VII

"WHEN," Lincoln asked, "shall I start, and where am I supposed to go?"

"Tonight," said the other. "There's no time to be lost." And he proceeded to give Lincoln the directions: "Three days' journey south of Lake Tchad, in the jungle clearing which is called by the Negroes the Meeting of the Elephants, not far from a mountain known as the Hill of Seven Spears."

He rose.

"Again," he added, "the Lodge of the Bi-Hassanyieh is dispersed. But this time of our own free will. None, after tonight, will enter this building. For, in the future, it will be too risky to meet here. So, when you return with word from the master, bring it to me where I live."

"The same old place?"

"Yes. The other side of the camel-market."

Once more he embraced the American.

"May Allah guard the stepping of your feet!" he said.

They left the hall. In the outer room, Fosiha was talking to a middle-aged Riffian. Lincoln recognized him as a former acquaintance, one of the dervishes, Mahmoud Kassem by name.

He turned to go, leaning on Mahmoud's arm, when Lincoln stopped him with a question that had been bothering him—an intensely personal question, though he tried to make it sound casual.

"What about our new military governor here? They say he is friendly to the natives."

"He is. Yet he dies—tonight."

"Oh, does he?" the American echoed in his thoughts. Aloud he said, "I thought all the great Christian dignitaries were to be murdered on the same day?"

"Not he. Sidi Elliot. I have been told, is a very shrewd man, thus a very dangerous man, who knows much—and may find out more."

"Still, if he dies tonight, wouldn't that be giving the plot away?"

"No. For he will be killed by a woman who will swear that she did it for the sake of revenge, because once he loved her, deserted her. It was Fosiha who had the wise notion . . ."

"And who," Fosiha exclaimed, "shall wield the dagger?"

"May be Lord Allah," said el-Andalosi, "give strength to your blade and true aim!"

He left with Mahmoud, and Fosiha and Lincoln were alone. Her head was bowed. He started at her. Again he wondered if she knew who he was; felt almost certain that she did.

He kept on staring at her, centering all his will on her in an effort to force her to look up, to return his gaze, to answer his unspoken question.

All at once she did. Her eyes met his and he heard her whisper: "How can I kill you—YOU?"

"Then—you know who I . . ."

"A woman in love—how can she help knowing?" Hard sobs choked her. "You see—once I loved you so, with all of me, all my passion, all my tenderness. And now—I hate you!"

"And yet you warned me . . ."

"You cannot read the riddle of Fosiha, the woman's riddle—eh?" she demanded. "You cannot understand how, hating you, I want you dead, and how loving you . . ."

She interrupted herself.

"I was untrue to our Lodge. I let our secret be given away to you, the foreigner, the Christian." She stepped up close to him. A deep, driving appeal was in her voice. "Swear to me that you will not use this secret."

"I am the governor. I can give no such oath. And you know it."

Silence fell between them.

"What—" she mumbled—"what can I do? Dear Allah—what can I do . . ."

"Yes," he echoed dully, sadly, "what can you do?"

"Only one thing" she exclaimed suddenly.

"What?"

"I shall wait for you, for the lover of my youth, in the inner hall of Paradise!"

And, before the American knew what was happening and how, her right hand reached into her robe and came out with a flicker and rush of steel.

He saw her hand lift. He saw the point of the dagger gleam in the yellowish half-light of the candle which was guttering out. He saw it descend—even as his fingers tried to grasp her wrist.

He saw—yes!—saw more than heard the sickening thud as she buried the weapon in her heart.

Then something blurred his vision for the fraction of a second.

"Perhaps," he said later on, when he spoke of it, "it was the dead woman's soul which passed through the room, through the door, into the open—and flew up, up, toward her God . . ."

Sitt Fosiha fell backward with a soft, gurgling cry—not a cry of pain, but the cry of a tired child falling asleep. She dropped into his outstretched arms, her blood trickling slowly, dyeing his burnoose with splotches of rich red.

CURIOUS WORLD

McKenney On Bridge

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

I dropped in at the bridge club operated by William Cheeks in Washington, and was surprised at the number of bridge leaders from different parts of the country who were there in uniform. I watched the boys play a few hands, and thought this hand would be interesting to my readers, not only because it is unusual, but it brings up a point in scoring that is often misunderstood — the question of honors.

Honors are scored by the side that holds them, whether it is the declarer or the declarer's side.

The declarer won the opening lead with the ace of diamonds in dummy and led a trump. When East showed out, things looked bad—but a good soldier doesn't mind that. South was careful not to play the King. West won and returned the jack of diamonds, which South ruffed. A heart was played to dummy's queen and another diamond ruffed.

When the queen fell, South was more hopeful. He then cashed the other two hearts and his three club tricks. Now he played a small spade and West was helpless. He cashed his trump ace but his queen went to the declarer's king. While South made four-odd doubled, West scored 100 for honors.

U.S. May Propose United Nations Form Food Group

WASHINGTON, July 14.—(AP)—The United States may propose to other United nations creation of a joint body to mobilize the agricultural resources of all to swell the amount of food available for increasing war and relief needs, and also develop production strategically so that a minimum of transportation will be required.

The idea, advanced by a food study group, is under consideration by the U.S. government. It is based on the premise that the United Nations are not now holding their own in food production, and that the United States cannot alone make up the prospective deficit even though it hopes for a record harvest next year.

Believe Many Canadian Navy Men in Attack

LONDON, July 14.—(CP)—Several hundred Canadian naval officers and men are believed here to have been part of the battering ram flung at Sicily last Saturday as the first stage of the Allied invasion drama.

The first four days of the Sicilian campaign have passed without direct reference to Canadian participation but the record of the Canadian navy in previous large combined operations at Dieppe and Narvik, and in training manoeuvres lends support to unofficial beliefs they took a good share in this one.

Meat Situation in U.S. Is Improved

CHICAGO, July 14.—AP—Improvement in the meat situation in the United States easing to some extent the beef scarcity to civilians was foreseen by packing company spokesmen yesterday after the unloading of a heavy volume of cattle at the country's major live stock centres Monday. Some 80,000 head of cattle arrived at the country's 26 biggest markets.

Member Complains Of Being "Hoaxed"

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—T. L. Church (Prog. Con., Toronto Broadview) complained yesterday in the House of Commons that he was the victim of a "hoax" involving the mailing of 100 copies of Hansard in the French language to his constituents on Orangemen's Day, July 12. He said he had ordered copies of debate reports in English to be mailed to 100 of his constituents.

Present Time Social Crises Are Explained

"Philosophy and the Present Social Crises in Rural Life," was the topic of an address given by Prof. Geo. Dykhuizen, professor of philosophy at the University of Vermont, Monday evening in room 142, Medical building, University of Alberta. Professor Dykhuizen is spending five weeks in Canada, and travelling in Alberta addressing community life conferences in many parts of the province under the auspices of the department of extension.

"The traditional philosophy of our society stated Prof. Dykhuizen, "has been called by many titles. It is known as liberalism, individualism or democracy. It is centred about the ideal of the sanctity of the individual and his right to liberty, equality, property, security and happiness. These philosophic ideas became so much a part of peoples minds that they were no longer topics for debate and discussion. They were forgotten as people came to accept them as virtually axiomatic. We accepted them as presuppositions of our thinking in moral, political, economic and social matters.

Today this is no longer the case. A crisis has arisen in our practical philosophic thinking. The things that we have been taking for granted have again become focal points in discussion. Three factors have caused the change: the challenge on the part of rival social philosophies, the adoption of novel practises and policies at home, and the impending developments on the international front. These three factors are at work in rural life.

It is the function of social philosophy to analyze, examine and criticize our concepts of liberty, freedom and equality and see that they measure up to expectations. The demand for philosophy as a working science in the service of the rural people is just awakening.

AFFECT COMMUNITY

Prof. Dykhuizen went on to show how each of these factors has affected the rural community. His examples came from a wide field of social, political, economic problems. The economics of such customs as compulsion and socialism, have caused the rural people to stop and size things. Defensive bargaining and action on the part of mixed organizations of farmers have opened a wide field of novel practises and policies. Such conferences as the international wheat conference promise to bring the farmers of the world closer together.

During the first two weeks of his stay Prof. Dykhuizen has visited the districts of Peace River, Olds and St. Paul. In the next three weeks he will visit in the Gonsehercs Lake district, in Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat.

U.S. Lines Broken By Tank Attack But Soon Sealed

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 14—(AP)—It was disclosed yesterday that enemy tanks broke through American lines and penetrated to the beaches in a counter-attack in southern Sicily Monday before they were hurled back and forced to retreat.

The American forces regrouped and struck back savagely to seal the gap. A considerable number of enemy tanks were reported to have been knocked out.

Nazi troops so far encountered were reported to have fought furiously in every engagement, in contrast to half-hearted Italian opposition.

Four Italian lieutenant-colonels walked into the Allied lines and surrendered.

Observers believed further enemy counter-attacks against the American lines were likely.

Hot Weather Injures Crops In Dry Areas

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics in the fourth of eight telegraphic crop reports of the season yesterday reported that hot weather fairly well across the Dominion induced rapid growth of crops during the past week but in the prairie provinces it led also to crop deterioration where the moisture supply was deficient.

"The areas chiefly affected were western Saskatchewan and south eastern Alberta," the bureau said.

CROPS STILL LATE

The general situation in Ontario appeared to indicate improvement but the crops were still very late. Quebec reported beneficial effects from warm weather of the past two weeks but correspondents expressed fear it would not be possible to overcome the handicap of delayed seeding and that yields of all crops would be reduced.

"Except in Manitoba and in some sections of Alberta, chiefly the central and northern areas, crop prospects in the prairie provinces were lowered during the past week," the bureau said.

The mercury bounded up to 100 degrees in the shade at several points and hovered in the 90's at most points in western Canada during the first part of last week but in the absence of rainfall in the drought area of southeastern Alberta and western areas of Saskatchewan, crop conditions deteriorated.

RAIN IN MANITOBA

Manitoba received good general rains and, except in the flooded areas of the Red River Valley, these were welcome and enhanced crop prospects. Another two provinces experienced showers but these were generally light and good soaking rains now are needed over a substantial part of both Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Coarse grain crops show a variable condition, particularly in Saskatchewan and Alberta, while flax appeared to be thin and weedy in a number of points and is being attacked by rust, chiefly in Saskatchewan areas.

Calgary's Trams Set New Record During Stampede

CALGARY, July 14.—(CP)—Calgary's municipal street railway carried 558,304 paid passengers last week to set a new all-time record for a stampede week, or any week for that matter, city officials report.

That was 111,008 more passengers than during the corresponding week in 1942, which was the previous high mark.

The revenue also took a corresponding upward leap and the $21 664.41 received last week was a record and $8,974.90 greater than a year ago.

Attendance at Public Schools Shows Decrease

A decrease of more than 300 students in Edmonton public schools this year was reported to the Edmonton public school board at its regular meeting, Tuesday night.

Ross S. Sheppard superintendent of schools, who presented the statistics said that in the high schools there was a decrease of 289 and in the elementary schools a decrease of 109. Intermediate schools showed an increase of 71 students.

STAMP SALES UP

More than $34 000 worth of war savings stamps were sold in Edmonton schools during the last term, Mr. Sheppard told the board, and this was more than a $20 000 increase from the 1941-42 term sales. During June, pupils purchased $3 489.75 worth of stamps, while the total for June, 1942, was only $1 519.65.

Richard J. Spilstead of the War Finance Committee was present at the meeting to request the school board to appoint one of its members to work with his committee. The purpose of this, he explained, was to bring teachers into the payroll savings section of the War Finance Committee, and to promote the sale of bonds and stamps to teachers through their own organization.

This has proven to be the most effective way of canvassing. It is a convenient plan, and the teachers would receive credit as a group, Mr. Spilstead said.

EXPRESSES APPROVAL

R. S. Sutherland expressed approval of the plan, stating that he believed teachers would rather work through their own organization, and that this would be more efficient. J. C. Clarke, teachers' representative, intimated that the teachers might prefer one of their own number to meet with the War Finance Committee.

The sinking fund committee of the school board reported that the sale of $32,000 Dominion of Canada bonds at 4½ per cent interest, maturing November 1, 1953, be made to C. L. Jackson and company at a price of $109.50 and accrued interest, as this was the highest bid. The board voted to accept the offer.

Upon recommendation of the management and health committee the board agreed that when preschool medical examinations are completed, school nurses will be permitted to take their annual holidays in two sets of four opening of schools for the next term, they will also be permitted to accept other employment if desired for a period not exceeding six weeks. Those on the permanent staff will be paid their regular salaries during the vacation period. The present staff of ten nurses will be retained until a change in school enrollment makes necessary a further review.

ENLARGE SCHOOL

Construction of wartime housing in the Norwood district will make necessary the addition of two rooms in the Parkdale school, Mr. Sheppard stated. To accomplish this it was decided to open the assembly hall of that school and erect partitions there for classrooms. The cost of this will be about $700, including required facilities for classroom heating and lighting.

The board voted to accept the resignation of M. J. Hilton, Mr. Hilton joined the city teaching staff in 1917, and has been principal of the technical high school.

Following inquiries concerning the possibility of the board's carrying sick insurance, the finance committee reported that its members were of the opinion that no advantage is to be gained at the present time by carrying such insurance, and recommended that no action be taken.

The request of the caretakers organization that the rate of pay to substitute caretakers be increased from $3.80 to $4.80 per day was granted.

NEW APPOINTMENTS

New appointments were made to various vice-principalships in the city. R. Cupples will assume that position at Eastwood school, after having held a similar one at Queen Alexandra. Stewart will succeed him at the latter school, and substitute vice-principal of Westmount school will be H. Harding.

Miss Vivian Miller was appointed vice-principal at North Edmonton school and Miss Aileen Miller to the intermediate staff there. Miss Dorothy Allyn will be vice-principal at Norwood school.

Following the appointment of W. Stewart, formerly of Victoria high school, to the intermediate staff, it was decided that he and W. C. Richards will teach physical training options and cadet training half-time at Victoria high school and McKay avenue intermediate schools.

Although no more regular board meetings will be held during the summer months, members were notified by H. G. Turner, secretary, that special meetings will be called in order to deal with construction of the new Belgravia Heights school. It is expected that it will be necessary to call a meeting in about a fortnight.

A. E. Ottewell presided at the Tuesday night meeting.

Canucks in North Africa Eager to Join Invasion

By LOUIS HUNTER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, July 14.—(CP)—A Canadian veteran of North African battles is waiting patiently to join his fellow-Canucks advancing into Sicily.

He is Emile Laforge, 31, of Vancouver, who expects to leave soon for the front.

He lived me on a crowded street of this African town yesterday when he noticed the Canadian was correspondent patches on the shoulders of my uniform. The greeting was: "Hi, Canada."

He came to Africa from Britain last April and went through the last campaign unscratched as a member of a famous 1st Army regiment. He was not involved in any close fighting although he saw dozens occasionally.

Canadian officers who served with the same 1st Army unit included Capt. Dick Brawley of Edmonton, member of a well-known Canadian infantry regiment, and Capt. Bobby Clarke of Vancouver, who belongs to a western Canada Highland regiment.

They were on the docks waiting to board a vessel bound for England when they were instructed to remain in Africa. Now they presume they are going to Sicily.

Laforge was at Bougie, Hammanlif and Medjez Elbah. He couldn't find superlatives to describe the 800-gun barrage laid down at Bougie.

From Medjez Elbah he went right through to Tunis, about 70 miles away, and then settled down for a few days at Sousse.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Female Tears Slay Men Who Bravely Face Armies

Nagging, Poor Health, Old Age, Dying Gag, More Dangerous Now Than Cannon Guns and Trench Mortars

Just now, when Flying Fortress fills our talk by day and haunts our slumbers at night, and when practically all human ingenuity is devoting itself to trying to devise more deadly instruments of destruction, do you ever think of those secret weapons that are far more dangerous than any trench mortar or tank, and that are the more dangerous to us because they are in the hands of those we love and trust?

Chief among these secret weapons are the tears that women have employed since time immemorial with dealy effect upon men, and before which many a hero, who has faced an artillery barrage without flinching, has crumpled up and gone down to defeat. Millions of women have wept men into marrying them, into stealing for them, into turning traitors to the mothers who bore them and the fathers who cherished them into becoming slaves to them. More men have been destroyed by women's tears than have been killed in all the wars that were ever waged on the earth.

WOMEN'S TEARS FATAL

Not without reason is the most feared weapon in the whole arsenal of war called tear gas. But man didn't invent it. It was women who discovered that there is some chemical in a woman's tears that causes a man's backbone to disintegrate and his morale to dissolve so that he loses all ability to defend himself and becomes as helpless as a jellyfish in her hands.

Another secret weapon that women use without mercy is nagging. Samson is credited with having slain his thousands with the jawbone of an ass, but that was an amateur performance compared with what many wives do with their tongues. Millions of husbands are [illegible] nagged to death, which is [illegible] slow torture and [illegible] subtly is it done that instead of being suspected of their crimes, the slayers often get the reputation of being wives who are particularly solicitous of their husband's welfare [illegible] of what they must do and [illegible]

ADULT'S POOR HEALTH

A third deadly weapon that both men and women use without mercy against their families is poor health. More innocents have been slaughtered by Father's bad heart and Mother's nerves than ever perished in any wholesale massacre. All of us know men who haven't done a lick of work in twenty years because of some mysterious ailment that the doctors were never able to diagnose. Their individualism hasn't affected their appetites, for which they piously thank God, because it enables them to keep up their strength, and to be able to amble down to the pool room, or to go fishing or hunting, but the mere mention of a job brings one of their "spells".

And we know plenty of women whose husbands and children spend their lives [illegible] Mother's "nerves" that always act up when there is any work to be done, or any crisis to be faced, or when Mother wants to take a [illegible]

A fourth lethal weapon that family Quislings use most effectively is old age. Often fathers and mothers, observing what a holdup weapon this can be made, begin using it on their children while they are still young and hearty and perfectly capable of supporting themselves. But they are lazy and tired of work so they retire from business, break up their homes and go to live with their children who don't want them and can't afford them, but who dare not shut their doors in the faces of their aged parents who are all of 45 [illegible]

OLD AGE SOBS DISCOURAGE

This old parent stuff is a weapon that can be counted on to cripple an ambitious boy and prevent him from going away from the old farm or the little town to seek his fortune, and to make a girl give up her sweetheart and become the family goat. Everytime she thinks of marriage and a likely young chap shows up, Mother and Father draw the don't - forsake - us - in - our - old-age [illegible] on her and aim for her heart, and there is another fatality.

But perhaps the most to be dreaded of all the secret weapons is the dying threat. A chronic ailment, however slight, can be used more effectively than a Bren gun. It always hits the mark. The happiness, the hopes, the ambitions of thousands of us are slain every day by members of our families who are always promising to die and never doing it. "Don't leave me. I won't be with you long now," is the way with which the old break down our morale and make us run up the white flag of surrender to their selfishness and tyranny.

Every parent should realize different backgrounds, different parental influences, differences in sex and personal experiences will create ideas and opinions which mirror those differences.

McCoy Health Service

The patient calls it chronic catarrh of the nose—the physician calls it rhinitis. Regardless of which name is used, it means catarrhad inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the nose.

In chronic rhinitis, the mucous membrane becomes inflamed and swollen and there is an increased secretion of mucus, as the result of continued irritation.

The blood vessels become distended or stretched, and their walls are softened. The membrane may thicken or harden. The nose feels stopped up or obstructed because of the combination of the changes in the membrane itself and the increased discharge of mucus. At the start, this discharge is thin and watery as well as profuse, as seen in the beginning of a cold, when the nose "runs". Later on the discharge may become thick and be hard to remove even by vigorous blowing of the nose.

The patient complains of a feeling of fullness in the nose or between the eyes. A dull headache may develop, but the boring persistent headache as seen in sinus trouble is not present and the patient describes more of a dull distress. When he goes to bed at night, the side of the nose next to the pillow becomes clogged up so that he is unable to breathe through the nostril.

In making the diagnosis of chronic catarrh it is advisable to make a local examination of the nose and the information gained in this way, when checking with the symptoms of the patient, will establish the nature of the complaint.

Hypertrophic and atrophic rhinitis are other forms. In Hypertrophic rhinitis, there occurs a marked increase in the connective tissue in the layer just below the mucous membrane, leading to more or less blocking of the passages with consequent mouth-breathing. In atrophic rhinitis, the mucous membrane becomes thin and hard, with the hardness replacing the normal softness which is seen when the membrane is healthy. The outstanding symptom is the unpleasant odor of the discharge. There may be considerable crust formation, and with the removal of one of these crusts, nosebleed may develop.

The sense of smell is often lost in any of the forms of rhinitis, and the patient will probably state that the sense of taste is dulled.

The patient with chronic catarrh needs a general treatment to build up health in every way possible and to overcome the irritation which caused the engorged condition of the mucous membrane. Suitable local treatment is often required in addition in many cases. Attention must be given to the diet and a large amount of the alkaline foods should be used. Constipation is the general rule in these cases, rather than the exception, and should be corrected.

Daily sunbaths or a substitute [illegible] given with the ultra violet ray generator, are of value. Plenty of sleep, fresh air, and exercise are other helps in achieving a cure of catarrh. Usually the patient will recover more rapidly if he avoids starches, milk and sweets for a few weeks.

Treatment given to the nasal membrane with the ultra violet ray applicator may be beneficial in promoting a better tone. Nasal sprays or douches are often suggested, and in experienced hands are of value in promoting cleanliness, but I believe that the catarrthal patient should use such methods only as directed by his physician. When he tries to use them without supervision he is likely to overdo it.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 6th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

What To Do

How is a funeral conducted from the house?

Answer—A house funeral should be very simple, and by its simplicity it is dignified.

The undertaker provides chairs for the friends and relatives who attend, and each person to arrive is met at the door by some representative of the family, and shown to a seat.

A row of chairs should be reserved near the casket for members of the family.

The casket is usually placed on a draped stand at one end of the [illegible] ing room. The space behind and on the sides of the casket are usually banked with flowers. The room may be darkened if desired.

The women of the family enter the room after the clergyman has arrived. They wear hats and veils if they intend to go to the cemetery.

Upon their return from the cemetery the family should find all signs of the funeral removed [illegible] and furniture replaced.

Minute Make-Ups

Eyes right! Eyes left! Repeat, repeat! These are beauty commands. One minute to exercise your eyes night and morning does much for their health and beauty. Use eye cream on the eyelids after powdering. This gives them a soft "baby" sheen. Use dark blue mascara to make your eyes look 's'oft"!

Rathie-Hunt Nuptials Held At All Saints' Cathedral

Pale blue delphinium and white peonies banked the altar of All Saints' Cathedral for the marriage Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. of Alice Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hunt, 10124 123 street, to William George Rathie, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Rathie of Vancouver. The Rev. Canon A. M. Trendell performed the ceremony.

For her marriage the bride wore a dressmaker suit of white bengaline with a matching beret style hat. Her accessories were white and she carried a prayer book covered with gardenias and sweetheart roses tied with white satin streamers.

Miss Alice Munro as bridesmaid wore a two-piece street dress of aquamarin, with a tiny hat of matching ribbon. She carried a colonial bouquet of cream colored roses and mauve summer flowers.

Arthur Irwin of Edmonton acted as best man and William Bligh Shore ushered guests to their seats.

During the signing of the register Miss Berneice MacBeth sang "O Perfect Love."

After the ceremony, a reception to members of the immediate families and a few close friends, was held at the home of Mrs. P. L. Debney, Clifton Place. Mrs. Hunt, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Rathie, mother of the bridegroom, received with the bridal party. Mrs. Hunt wore a navy blue silk suit and a violet sailor hat. A corsage of deep mauve sweetpeas and sweetheart roses completed her ensemble. Mrs. Rathie's gown was rose crepe with which she wore a large brimmed hat of navy straw and a corsage of cream roses.

Toast to the bride was proposed by Col. E. H. Strickland.

Leaving on their wedding trip to Calgary and Banff the bride changed to a navy blue silk suit featuring a pink fichu, navy accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Dutch Women Forego Polish

MONTREAL, July 14.—From The Netherlands government information bureau, Montreal, Que., comes a story telling of another of the lesser evils of the occupation of Europe. It is one which, although small, looms large in the Dutch housewife's life. A Dutch escapee, who has recently arrived on free soil, gives details about this.

The housewife cannot brush, polish, scour or scrub, because the required tools and materials are considered unnecessary for the war effort and, therefore, on German orders, they are not being manufactured.

The once spotless Dutch home, with its bright highlights of polished surfaces, now looks dull and grubby, enhancing the gloom which prevails throughout the country.

Another of the minor troubles caused by the occupation is that people in Zeeland, the southwest part of Holland, can no longer obtain the material for the Zeeland costume which is still generally worn in that part of the country.

Experiments to produce substitutes failed largely. Caps used to be made of heavy pique, a material which no longer exists in occupied Holland. The Zeeland housewives had large quantities of material in store when the war started, but before long their stocks will be exhausted and the Zeeland children will no longer be turned out in the picturesque costume.

What about RUSSIA

AS AN ALLY AT THE PEACE TABLE IN THE POST-WAR ?

FOR 20 years Russia has fooled the experts. It did NOT fool Associated Press correspondent Henry C. Cassidy. Cassidy, after years in Russia, has just written the new national best-seller, MOSCOW DATELINE. It is called the soundest book on Russia yet published.

Accurate, fair, highly interesting, MOSCOW DATELINE is the first book to tell the full story of the Russian war to date, the only book to tell the dramatic inside stories of the historic Stalin conferences with Churchill and Willkie, the only book to answer the big questions about the Soviets every American ought to know.

MOSCOW DATELINE begins in this newspaper soon. You owe it to yourself to read it!

40 Coastal Guns Taken by Canucks, British on Sicily

LONDON, July 14—(CP)—Canadian and British troops who landed at Pachino in south-east Sicily as the invasion of that Italian island began last Saturday captured intact more than 40 heavy and light coastal batteries, said a delayed dispatch to the Daily Mail today from its correspondent at the battle front.

There was no fighting for the guns because the Italian crews decamped without firing a shot, the dispatch said.

Board Hears Discussion on Drainage Plan

A $39,000,000 scheme for diversion of water from the North Saskatchewan — and Red Deer river systems to irrigate some 900,000 acres in Alberta and Saskatchewan was urged before the Alberta legislative committee on post-war reconstruction, by a delegation from the Hanha Board of Trade, Wednesday afternoon.

Such a water-diversion project, serving central and eastern Alberta and part of Saskatchewan, would place this province's livestock industry on a firm foundation, and at the same time would make available for intensive agriculture an area almost twice the size of the combined acreages of present irrigation projects, it was said in the submission.

AN ALTERNATIVE

An alternative to this scheme, which was originally suggested some years ago by William Pearce, a civil engineer of Calgary, is a $50,400,000 plan for a pumping scheme. The Pearce plan calls for a gravity system of waterflow.

"Allowing 60 per cent for labor and 40 per cent for materials, this would mean that in the first year or two after the war, construction of this project would see between $24,000,000 and $30,000,000 spent in actual wages at a time when it would be most needed," it was said at the hearing.

The Hanna delegation was headed by W. O. Turner. Other members were: J. G. O'Dell; O. C. McNully; Charles Wylie; N. B. James, M.L.A.; A. L. Harvey and M. Baldwin of Priest.

Chairman of the reconstruction committee is Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, and secretary H. D. Carrigan.

Mitchell Is Acting Telephone Deputy

A. M. Mitchell, who has been comptroller of Alberta Government Telephones for some years, is acting as deputy minister and general manager of the system, Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of railways and telephones, announced Wednesday.

Mr. Mitchell has acted in this capacity ever since the late James D. Baker, deputy minister of telephones, took ill some weeks ago. Mr. Baker died last Saturday.

Mr. Fallow stated that Mr. Mitchell will continue in his acting capacity until a permanent appointment is made, and it is understood this will be done as soon as possible.

Mr. Mitchell has been connected with the government telephone system for a number of years, and has held other posts before being appointed comptroller.

Futures Slip On Grain Mart

WINNIPEG, July 14—(CP)—Wheat futures slipped today on the Winnipeg grain exchange after a brisk opening to finish ⅛-⅞ cent a bushel lower. July made a new seasonal high of $1.09½ early in the session, but closed at $1.08⅞.

Moderate buying was attributed to American account. There was no export business in Canadian wheat or flour reported.

Shippers took approximately 800,000 bushels of Nos. 1 and 2 Northern in the cash wheat market. Dealings in cash coarse grains were confined to odd cars of oats and barley.

Trading was quiet in rye futures with only minor trades posted in the December option. Oats and barley futures were bid at ceiling levels.

Country marketings amounted to 740,000 bushels yesterday, compared with 616,000 bushels last year.

In Africa

Cpl. Bernard L. Bricker of Lavoy who has been reported among Canadian reinforcements to land in Africa since the invasion of Sicily began last Saturday. Cpl. Bricker, who is well-known here, joined the Calgary Highlanders in 1939, and went overseas early in 1940. He is now with the Edmonton Regiment. Whether he is still with that unit is unknown. His wife resides at Camrose.

Skilled Pilot Is Forced Down: Lands Safely

Skilful operation of a Canadian Pacific Air Lines Waco airplane by Tom Laurie, pilot of the machine, probably saved his two passengers from serious injuries when he was compelled to make a forced landing near Little Red Deer Lake, south of Camrose, on the return lap of a mercy flight.

Forced to make a landing Laurie set his machine for Little Red Deer Lake, a small body of water, but was forced to put the machine down on land although equipped with pontoons. So skilfully did he operate the landing that beyond a shaking his sick passenger and his wife came through the ordeal without a scratch.

The under-carriage equipment of the airplane was badly broken, and repair crews from CPA depot here went out to the scene of the crash Wednesday. The crack-up occurred late Tuesday evening.

Pilot Laurie was returned to Edmonton with George Oettel, Cold Lake, and his wife, the former being brought to the city for treatment for blood poisoning. After the crash Smith's ambulance, Edmonton, was called and the sick man was conveyed to University hospital, where he is reported as resting comfortably.

Awaiting the arrival of the overdue plane, scheduled at Cooking Lake at 7:30 p.m., Max Smith of Smith's ambulance was informed by a CPA dispatcher at 11 p.m. that the plane had crashed. Returning to Edmonton, he drove the 75 miles to Camrose over rain-soaked roads. Until his ambulance arrived, Oettel was admitted to the Camrose hospital. He was driven there by A. F. Rutz, Ferintosh farmer.

CONDITION UNCHANGED

Oettel, who owns a mink and fox ranch in the Cold Lake district, was brought to the University hospital in Edmonton where he is reported as resting comfortably, although his condition remains unchanged.

His wife, Pilot Laurie, and a nurse, Miss B. E. Mays from the Cold Lake hospital, were brought into Edmonton with him.

Mrs. Oettel said that her husband was bitten, July 2, when he picked up the family cat, which was believed dead.

When the man's condition became worse and blood-poisoning set in, a blood sample was sent to Edmonton, but failed to determine the nature of the poisoning. Facilities at Cold Lake were regarded as inadequate, so it was agreed to fly the patient here.

SEVERE STORM

Pilot Laurie took off at Cold Lake at 6:30 p.m., and about 100 miles out on the flight, he encountered a severe storm. Efforts to dodge the storm failed, and the plane's fuel supply dwindled rapidly. The pilot attempted to find a lake where there was a nearby farmhouse. When the engine died, with an altitude of less than 3,000 feet, he tried to land on a slough. The plane overshot the slough, skidded a few feet along grass in a meadow, then the nose dug into the ground, and the plane turned over.

Miss Mays and the sick man, seated in the back seats of the plane, were thrown forward. Farmers who saw the plane in distress in the air, arrived shortly after and rushed the party to Camrose.

Battle Order to Canucks Invading Italian Island

WITH THE CANADIANS IN SICILY, July 11.—(Delayed)—(CP)—Following is the text of the Canadian general's order of the day read to the Sicily-bound Canadian expedition at sea:

"The Canadian force will enter its first battle beside formations of the 8th Army which have already had in this war an opportunity to add to the great fighting traditions inherited from the past.

"We, too, inherit fighting traditions equal to that of all armies in the British Empire.

"To enhance that record by a decisive success in our allotted task will require the full courage and skill of each one of us.

MUST PROVE SKILL

"Neither our friends nor our enemies doubt the courage of the Canadian soldier—our skill will be suspect until it has been proven in battle.

"We have spent over three years training for this meeting with our enemies. No formation going into its first battle has been more thoroughly prepared.

"Co-operating with the naval and air forces we form part of the best found expedition that ever set sail to invade a hostile country.

"We fight under commanders who have led their armies through a succession of great victories.

"It remains only to apply the lessons of our training under the stress of actual operations. I am not trying to tell you the task will be easy. War isn't easy—it is a hard, bitter struggle—it is the ultimate test of moral and physical courage and skill at arms.

PLAN REHEARSED

"I do tell you that you will be launched into battle on a good plan which has been rehearsed, and if you really apply what you have been taught during three years of preparation success will be ours.

"We are honored in having units of the Royal Navy, the British army and the R.A.F. co-operating with us in this, our first big adventure, and I welcome them on your behalf.

"I wish each one of you good luck in the business of smashing the Italians."

Airmen Praise Entertainment Given in City

Airmen of No. 3 M Depot are very appreciative of the generous hospitality of this city. Groups of organized clubs and services of Edmonton are contributing very worthwhile forms of entertainment to thousands of lads who come from every corner of the Dominion. The Y.M.C.A. War Services Club, under the direction of Fred Youmans and Floyd Wilcox, is very busy handling the various programs and entertainments arranged for the men.

During the past week 305 airmen from the depot attended dances as guests of the following: Alberta Wheat Acreage, the ABC Club, Aircraft Repair, Beta Pi Gamma Club and the Cloverdale Community Club. Hostesses in charge were Ruth Bryant, Carol Edwards, Mac Owen, Miss Ramsay, Helen McComb and Mrs. Scott. One hundred and twenty attended parties sponsored by the Tuesday night Y.M.C.A. residence, St. Catherines entertainment club, the P. C. and T. club, the N.A.D.P. group, and a group from the government offices.

INVITATIONS WELCOME

Particularly favored are those invitations to home dinners and house parties which the airmen look upon as a special luxury.

The Australian and New Zealand lads on the station are receiving an uncommon share of popularity. These boys have a keen interest in Canadian habits of living and the ways and methods of doing things in this country. Visits to the city power plant and the university farm were arranged during the week-end for two groups of Aussies.

Fred Youmans, the popular Y.M.C.A. director of war services at No. 3, has been tireless in his efforts to give the boys everything in services, social and recreational activities.

Bermuda Assembly Drops Restrictions On Motor Vehicles

HAMILTON, Bermuda, July 14.—(CP)—Bermuda's recently-elected assembly took precedent-breaking action Monday night by deciding to remove all restrictions against the use of motor vehicles. But the war automobiles were banned.

Bitter opposition to the proposal came particularly from the labor assembly member, formerly of Winnipeg. He declared (our general use of cars would) injure the tourist trade and contended that this was no time to spend a large amount of money on road construction.

Two R.A.F. Fliers Killed in Crash

ASSINIBOIA, Sask., July 14.—(CP)—Two members of the Royal Air Force were killed yesterday when their training plane crashed near the airport at No. 34 Service Flying Training School, Nesbitt, Sask., here today. The airmen's names will be issued shortly.

The average man shaves 20 square miles of face during his lifetime.

Physical Witness Plan For Canada Given Approval

OTTAWA, July 14.—(CP)—The House of Commons social security committee Monday considered and approved a draft proposal "to promote the physical fitness of the people of Canada."

The act is to be administered by Pensions Minister Ian Mackenzie.

The bill provides for the creation of a "National Council on Physical Fitness." The members, who will not be appointed by the governor-in-council. Only the national director will receive a salary, the other members receiving actual expenses incurred in the discharge of their duties.

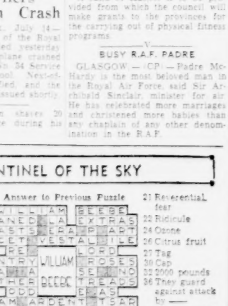

A fund of $225,000 is to be provided from which the council will make grants to the provinces for the carrying out of physical fitness programs.

BUSY R.A.F. PADRE

GLASGOW.—(CP)—Padre McHardy is the most beloved man in the Royal Air Force, said Sir Arnold Rawlinson, military chief. He has celebrated more marriages and christened more babies than any chaplain in any other denomination in the R.A.F.
